

FIND WEST POINT CADET UNCONSCIOUS

Charles Romeyn Lay Beside Sauger-ties Road This Morning With Motorcycle Nearby—In Kingston City Hospital.

Charles Romeyn, said to be a cadet at West Point Military Academy, was found unconscious alongside the Saugerties road about 11:30 o'clock this morning, and brought to the Kingston City Hospital by Dr. Crawford of Saugerties. Near Romeyn's body lay a motorcycle.

At the hospital it was found that the man was badly injured with a possible fractured skull. In his pocket was found a paper which identified him as Romeyn. Dr. Chandler wired the authorities at West Point seeking information regarding Romeyn but at a late hour this afternoon had not received a reply.

Just how Romeyn was injured is unknown. He was not in uniform.

TWO AUTO ACCIDENTS REPORTED ON THURSDAY

Two minor auto accidents were reported to police headquarters Thursday. The first was a collision of cars owned by E. Noble of 162 Abuel street and John Bigler of Port Ewen, which occurred on Abuel street. Both cars were slightly damaged. The other was a collision between cars owned by Harry Stein of Brooklyn and N. H. Berry of Poughkeepsie on the Strand in which both cars were somewhat damaged.

VACATION MONEY OF TELEPHONE GIRL RESTORED

The telephone girl who lost $51 as told in Thursday's Freeman will have her vacation after all. Shortly after The Freeman, describing how she couldn't go on a keenly anticipated vacation trip on account of losing the money, appeared on the streets Thursday, the finder of the roll of bills called the telephone office and was told the name of the owner and restored the money.

CATHOLIC DAUGHTERS TO HOLD FOOD SALE TOMORROW.

The Catholic Daughters of America will hold a food sale at the R-G-R-store on North Front street Saturday from 11 o'clock in the morning until 5 in the afternoon. Home made cake, pie and candy will be for sale. The proceeds will be for the building fund. The same ladies who had charge of the recent bazaar have charge of this sale.

Knights Donated $10.
Kingston Council, Knights of Columbus, donated $10 through Mrs. Hayes to purchase articles made by the blind for use at the Tuberculosis Camp and for the poor and needy.

Slater-Merrihew.
At the Phenicia M. E. Church Thursday morning, June 14, a very pretty wedding took place when Miss Nancy Merrihew became the bride of C. R. Slater of Ravenna. The church was prettily trimmed, each pew bearing a regulation bouquet tied by ribbon. The altar rail was banked and from the center a large arch was erected. The color scheme was white and green. The church was filled by relatives and friends who came in honor of the wedding. C. Short was usher for the occasion. Miss Lorna Anderson Demark presided at the organ and as she sounded the first notes and as she sounded the first notes accorded to the altar by the best man, E. Van Merrihew, a brother of the bride. The congregation arose when the bride leaning on the arm of her mother, Mrs. Ella Merrihew, went down the aisle under the escort of the bridesmaid, Miss Minnie Simpson. The company took their places under the arch where the pastor, the Rev. W. R. Meeker was in waiting. After prayer the ceremony was performed and they were united in marriage, the double ring service being used. Miss "an Demark played softly throughout the ceremony, "I Love You Truly." The bride looked charming in a suit of gray, richly embroidered, while her hat of the same tone was artistically relieved by a touch of dark blue. She carried roses and sweet peas. The bridesmaid looked very striking in a suit of blue, the train being well blended for the same. Her bouquet was syriaca. To the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march the bride and groom followed.

by the brass band and best of all, the church was crowded there way out to the church grounds where the church was under a big shade tree. In an ideal day in June, confetti and rice emphasized the occasion and the old slippers and tin cans had not forgotten to come to signalize their good omen for good luck. Firecrackers and auto horns made one think of a day time "skimmington." The newlyweds took the morning train for New York city from where they will go to other places further south. Upon their return they will reside at Yacena, A. Yacena. Mr. Merdhead will be missed by many friends here as well as in other places. She was a fine singer and a good musician. She was organist of the M. F. church and played in the movies at Phenocleia. Phenocleia extends its best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Slater. There are friends and relatives from Irvington, N. J., New York, Newburgh, Kingston and Pine Hill present.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

LANGUAGE OF LACE

Nancy was invited one day to call on a lady who made lace and to the lady's house was something almost alive. Lace had a language to her. I am going to tell you what she said to Nancy as she showed her the wonderful lace she had made and other places of lace which were very, very old and which she had mended so they would stay together.

"Nancy tried one of them on," she said. A lovely lace fan which she had made had won a particularly fine gold medal for she had planned just how to make the lace—or the design as she called it.

"You see," she told Nancy, "there are the initials worked through the lace of the lady for whom the fan was made, and there are long-tailed birds and roses to make the fan a festive, handsome possession."

"I made the fan in the garden," she went on. "I love to work on the lace there for it helps the work."

"Every spring I go out into the country to make outlines of the spring flowers. One can make them even lovelier in the lace when one has been close to their fragrance out of doors. 'Here is a lace lily I did in a garden one time. It was so sweet scented a lily.' And Nancy smiled to herself as she thought that the lady was actually remembering the scent of the real lily as she looked upon the lace lily."

Then the lady showed Nancy marvelous bridal veils she had made. Some had family crests embroidered upon them, and some had the favorite flower of the young bride worked into the lace.

Nancy tried one of them on and looked at herself in the mirror and she could almost hear the wedding march play and imagine that she was many years older and that she was being married and wearing a beautiful veil like this!

Then the lady showed Nancy apple blossoms made in lace.

"Here is a lace dragon fly," she said. And Nancy thought a dragon fly made of delicate lace was a graceful creature, indeed. Nancy was quite an admirer of dragon flies and of their gracefulness.

The lady had lace peacocks for her calling cards! So you see lace was the most important thing in almost every way to her.

"The peacock," the lady told Nancy, "stands for something that will last for ever, not for good luck, but I think of nothing more wonderful than of making lace for ever, so I like him for my special pet!"

"Far across the sea," the lady went on, "there are many lace makers. Mostly they are the wives of the old fishermen. The people from the coast of Devonshire have always been famous for lace making ever since the Flemish brought the art to them back in the Elizabethan days."

"There is lace known as the Buckingham Point lace of the midlands. That was started by Catharine of Aragon back in the days of Henry VIII. They have enchanting bobbins, carved, and illustrative of church windows, and the bobbins have charms dangling from them."

"But bobbins?" asked Nancy. "What are they?"

So she showed Nancy some small carved wooden implements which she explained were used as thread weavers. Upon this lady's bobbins were printed "My heart is true; it cannot change." For lace will always be loved by her!

"Yes, there is a language to lace," the lady told Nancy. "The language is different in various parts of the world, too—we have different words for the same things. We have the winkle pin which is a lace decoration or ornament and there is the Toad-in-the-Hole which is a pretty lace filling."

"I wonder if the Toad family know that," laughed Nancy.

"I wonder," she smiled the lady.

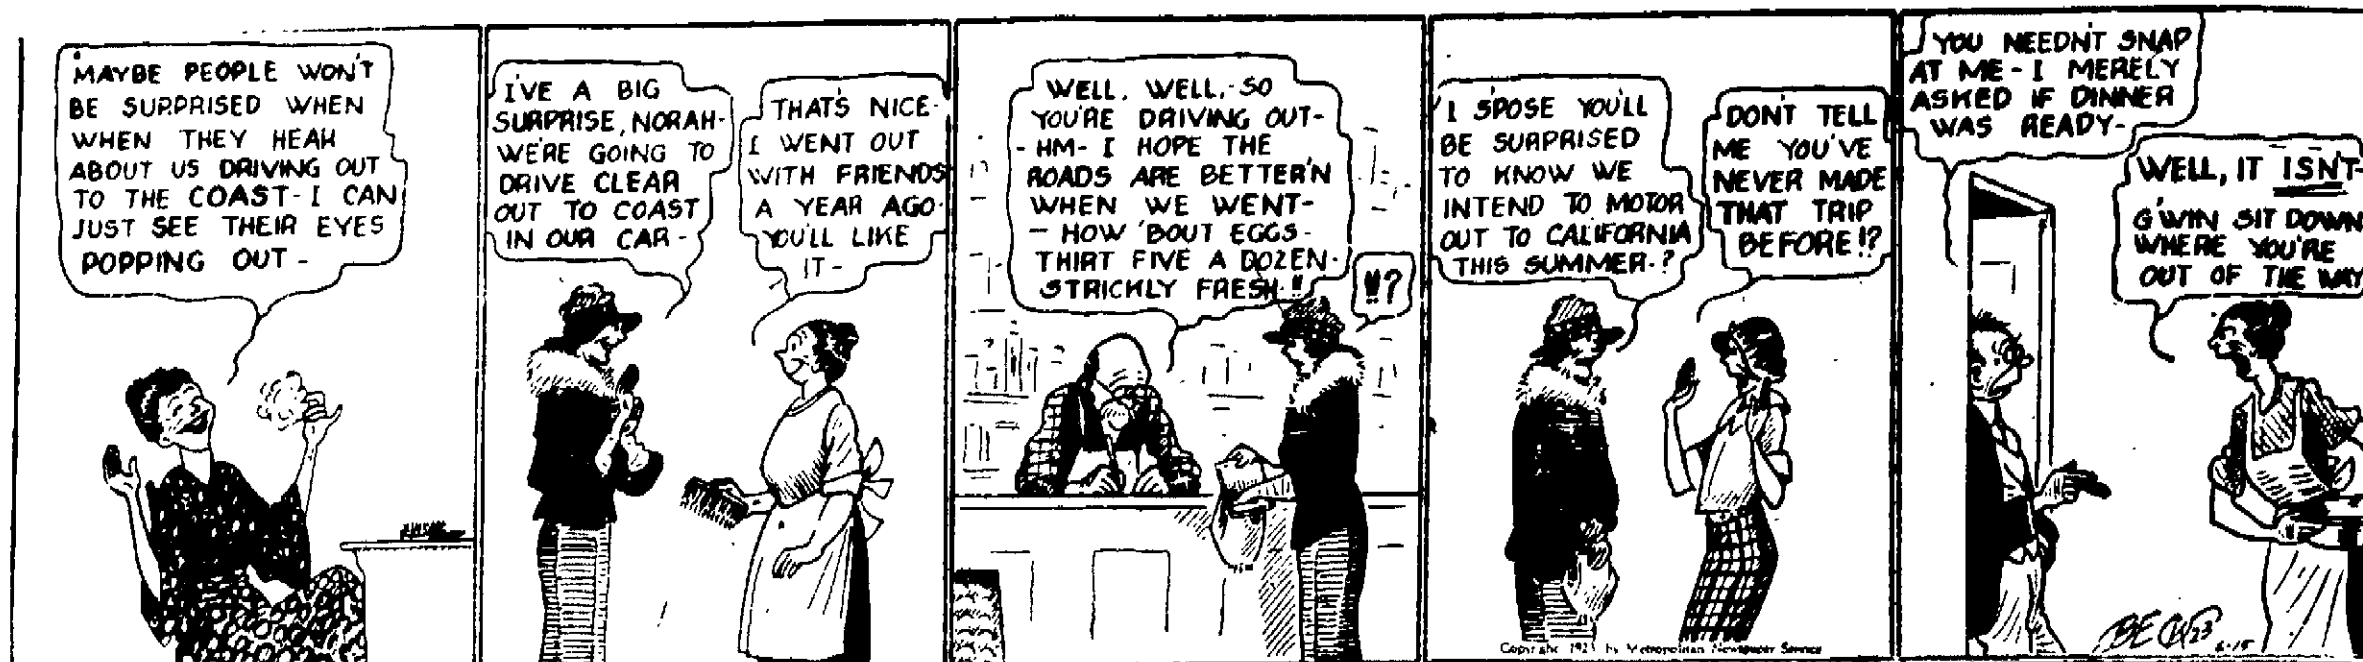

"Lace," she continued, "has so much history attached to it, with its quaint figures of bygone days and its customs and myths and stories woven into the exquisite patterns. And lace, too, is so full of romance."

Then Nancy saw a whole collection of laces; some of them had come from abroad, old laces, modern laces, laces of historical meaning, and laces which the lady had made up out of her own thoughts.

Object of Greatest Admiration.

There are nine or thirteen million things in this well-known republic that elicit our admiration; none, however, more than the woman who does her own work and still has time to keep her oldest daughter at her piano lesson!—Buffalo Evening Times.

GAS BUGGIES—It's Things Like That That Make Life Weary

The KITCHEN CABINET

Blessed are they whose furniture is as inexpensive or so shabby that children and dogs are not excluded from its sacred precincts.—Henry C. Merwin.

A CUPFUL OF SOUR CREAM

Farmers often ask, "What can be done with the surplus sour cream?"

A city woman never is or very seldom is embarrassed with such riches. Countless delectable dishes may be prepared with sour cream. One is the most delicious of spice cakes, using the cream in place of milk in the recipe and using judgment as to its richness, by adding such proportion of shortening as the usual recipe requires, allowing for the richness of the cream.

One or two tablespoonfuls of sour cream in a soup gives a zest that is entirely lacking in sweet cream, adding richness and smoothness to the soup.

Roast veal or roast chicken well-browned and then cooked with one cupful of sour cream poured over it, basting frequently, is delicious.

Steak With Sour Cream.—Cut steak in serving-sized pieces, brown, put in a baking dish and pour the gravy from the pan over it. Add a sauce, using one cupful of sour cream, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one tablespoonful of onion juice, one-half teaspoonful of salt, and one-fourth cupful of dried and soaked mushrooms. Bake in a slow oven. This sauce is nice with fish or hamburger steak.

Chicken Fricassee.—Chop one onion and fry in fat until yellow; add paprika. Cut up a chicken and fry in the fat until a golden brown, add one cupful of water with a tablespoonful of parsley and simmer until tender. Pour a cupful of hot sour cream over the chicken and serve sprinkled with minced parsley and salt and paprika to taste.

Scalloped Potatoes and Onions.—Put a layer of sliced potatoes in a baking dish, cover with a layer of sliced onions, adding seasonings and parsley. Repeat and pour over the dish enough sour cream to almost cover. Cover the dish and bake until the vegetables are done.

Boiled Cauliflower With Dressing.—Heat one-half cupful of sour cream, adding salt and pepper to season, pour over hot boiled cauliflower and serve at once.

The Final Economy.

Burrows was one of those weak individuals who had bought a flivver and then spent dollars equipping it with every gas-saving and engine efficiency device he could lay his hands on. If the savings to which these devices laid claim could have been totaled the figures would have declared that the blooming engine should have manufactured gasoline and tires instead of using them. Burrows, however, is cured now. Last week he read an alluring letter from a stranger who guaranteed to show him how his gasoline bill could be cut in two. He sent his $2 in the first mail and could scarcely await the reply. When it came he tore open the envelope with trembling fingers, and read: "Walk half the time!"—Kansas City Star.

The Old Habit.

It was recently demonstrated in a civil service examination of a number of prospective game deputies that no matter how old we become, there is little doubt as to the possibility of our childhood characteristics coming to the fore. In the examination the class was working very industriously at their papers. One member who was many years past his childhood and who was about to enter his second childhood, raised his hand high above his head and shook it vigorously, much in the manner of school children. When the examiner asked him what was the matter, he gave this reply: "Teacher, Pete here is copyin' off my examination paper."—Columbus Dispatch.

Changing His Mind.

"Looky yur, Runt, dad-burn your ornery picture," yelled Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "Didn't I tell you the first time you got into a fight I'd whale thunder out of you? Who in the deuce bunged you up that-a-way?" "I fit with four, five of the Glagery kids and two of the Lazzenberrys. And if you don't like it, by gosh, you can jump it," replied the lad. "That'll do, now! Go on away from me, or I'll defend myself with the ax."—Kansas City Star.

America's Marvels

NATURAL AND OTHERWISE

By T. T. Maxey

THE GRASSHOPPER GLACIER

Near the ancient town of Cooke City, Mont., northeast of Yellowstone park, there is an immense glacier of ice field. This glacier is composed of thousands of strata. These strata, or layers of ice, are filled with a species of insect, locally referred to as "grasshopper" for want of a better name, and now extinct.

The scientific explanation of this peculiar phenomena is that, no one knows how long ago, this section of the country was visited by a plague of these insects; that while flying over the mountains of the Bear Tooth range, in what is now known as the Bear Tooth National forest, they were caught in snowstorms, carried down to earth and died. The passage of these swarms of insects continued at intervals year after year. Winter after winter, millions upon millions of these insects were caught in the snowstorms and perished.

This glacier is approximately one mile wide and upwards of half a mile long. Because of the fact that it lies in a rock-rimmed, bowl-shaped space on the shoulder of a mountain, at an elevation of about 11,500 feet above sea level, no one can accurately determine just how thick it is. Its depth may be as great as 1,000 feet.

The layers of ice which make up this glacier are alternately light and dark in color. This, it is thought, is accounted for by the fact that each year the snow which fell during the period after the flights had ceased, being pure, containing no insects, fell, froze and formed a "light" strata, whereas the snow which formed the succeeding strata, fell during one of these insect flights, contained countless numbers of their carcasses and formed a "dark" strata.

Certain it is that there is not a similar spectacle in the known world. (©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union)

Safety First.

Mrs. Knapp—Lots of better men than you have hinted that they'd have been glad to marry me if I hadn't taken you.

Her Husband—I notice they never even hinted it till after I married you.

Avoiding the Trap.

"You've known her since she was a little girl, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"How old would you say she is?"

"My dear, I can't tell you exactly, but I'm sure she can't be a day over twenty-two."

ESOPUS.

Esopus, June 14.—The business meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society that was held at the home of Mrs. John Beaver, Jr., was largely attended. One new member was admitted. Arrangements were made for a strawberry festival to be held on the church lawn Wednesday evening, June 20. There will be strawberries, home made ice cream and cake, candy and soft drinks on sale. Everybody welcome. At the close of the meeting delicious refreshments were served. The next meeting will be held July 11 at the home of Mrs. Garrison and Mrs. A. Jones.

The Children's Day exercises will be held in the M. E. Church Sunday afternoon, June 17, at 3 o'clock (new time). At the beginning of the service there will be several children christened. The district superintendent, Dr. George Grinton, will be present and at the close of the exercises he will hold the first quarterly conference. All those who have donors to donate are asked to bring them to the church Saturday afternoon at 1:30. There will be no Sunday school Sunday afternoon on account of Children's Day exercises.

GLENFORD.

Glenford, June 14.—Glenford M. E. Sunday school will hold its Children's Day exercises on June 17, Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, standard time. A splendid program is being prepared.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JUNE 15, 1923.

The Wisconsin Supreme Court has decided that a man can not be searched without a warrant. The Constitution of the United States reached the same decision as far back as 1787.

The Nordic supremacy that is "threatened" by Cripes, Firpo and Siki is not the kind that we have been wont to boast of. Brains, leadership, are achievements to which successful pugilism has in no way contributed.

The extraordinary honors conferred by Governor Baxter of Maine on his dead dog are not altogether without historical precedent. There were the geese of Rome, the horse that was made consul, the ibis or Nile bird, the sacred cow, the venerated crocodiles, etc. Even dog deities are on record.

According to report, the amount of drinking has been much reduced in Paris owing to the recognition that the practice of voluntary temperance pays in a business way and in other ways. In the United States a similar decrease for the same reason has been in progress during fifty years before prohibition.

Our Democratic friends told us that we must permit other nations to pay their debt to us in goods, as they have no money. Well, we are doing just exactly that, and under a Republican tariff law. In the month of March other nations sent us goods to the value of $60,000,000 in excess of the value of goods we sold them. They paid their debts at the rate of $2,000,000 a day in goods. What the Democrats want, they are getting under the Republican tariff. They said the tariff would bar out imports, but the record shows they were badly mistaken. We are importing the goods, but not at the low and ruinous figure that would prevail if the Democratic tariff were still on the statute books.

A Hindu reformer, propagandizing in America, solemnly complains of the treatment of brides in India. "No provision at all," he is quoted, "is ever made to make sure whether the poor girls will be treated kindly at their husbands' homes or not. It is not certain that all the husbands will turn out to be noble, kind-hearted men and so fulfill the happy anticipations so often dearly cherished by the bride." If there is any country where it is "certain" that all husbands will turn out to be noble creatures, it is not marked on the map. Even in America brides still incur such risks, but probably in time we shall achieve a constitutional amendment intended to eliminate them. In that case, with "equal rights" in view, the amendment should provide for unselfishness in the bride as well as for nobleness in her mate.

TWILIGHT OF THE STATES.

According to the general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, Governor Smith of New York, in signing the bill repealing the Mullin-Gage act, "has elected himself chief commander of the nullifiers, bootleggers and rum-runners." But why heap intolerant and abusive censure of this sort upon New York alone? What about Wisconsin, whose assembly has voted 47 to 43 to repeal the state prohibition enforcement law? What about Massachusetts, whose enforcement act is still to be submitted to a referendum? What about Maryland, which has declined to pass any enforcement act at all?

Several further questions are suggested. If a state is free to make a law, why is it not free to unmake that law in response to majority demand? If state legislatures are free only to confirm Federal laws, why should states make laws at all? Why should not all the law-making be left to Congress, the states as states going out of business? That seems to be precisely what many loud talkers now want, for they are plainly growing more and more impatient with our constitutionally provided dual system of government—a system designed to foster and maintain local self-government. The said loud talkers plainly wish the entire country to be ruled in every particular through imperial decrees from Washington. How large a following they really have is uncertain, but there is a seeming acquiescence on the part of a very large element, and it looks as if we have reached an era which may be described as the twilight of the States.

2. Is there such a thing as a snake bird?
3. Can boa-constrictors swallow an ox?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes.

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. I want to collect beetles, but haven't much time to search. Can you suggest where to look?
We suggest trying a bait of a dead mouse or sparrow or some such creature. Place one on loose earth in the garden and nail one to the side of the barn or some such situation. After about 12 hours visit this bait and it is likely you will find something for your collecting net.
2. Do otters live on land or where?
Their homes are on land in situations that vary from cavities among rocks in hilly country, to dens on river banks, usually under tree roots that form a natural hollow. Sometimes the hole has one entrance via water. Otters are good swimmers and hunt fish, but they also move rapidly on land and over ice. They have a trick of using "slides" of muddy or snowy banks down which they slide often into water. This is Lutra canadensis, not the sea otter.
3. Why are so few fossil birds found?
Nobody can tell you accurately. One guess is that as birds' bodies are very light, and would be carried away in floods that may have swept the earth. The delicate texture of feathers and the slithiness of birds' bones might account for their complete disintegration. Some fossils are found, it is true, but they shed little light on extinct types of bird life, inasmuch as they are only fossil specimens of similar birds still living.

Bible Class Picnic Monday.

The regular monthly business meeting of the adult Bible class of the Reformed Church of the Comforter was held Wednesday night in the church parlors with 33 members present. One new member was added to the roll. After the regular routine business was disposed of it was voted to hold a basket picnic at Dasher's Falls on June 18th. The members will meet at the church between 5:30 and 6 o'clock and go by auto from there. All members who can furnish a car are requested to so notify Eugene Fowler. After a social hour to which the refreshment committee contributed a cordy share, the meeting adjourned to meet again on September 12th, when they will again take up the work of "Service."

WHY—

Phenomenon Called Mirage Is Wonder of Mankind

Refraction plays many magical tricks with men's eyes. It is responsible for the extraordinary phenomenon called mirage, which has excited the wonder of mankind in every age. Owing to differences of temperature, barometric pressure, etc., in adjacent parts of the atmosphere, the refraction is sometimes capriciously varied so that the most abnormal sights are seen, says an exchange. Parts of the earth seem detached and set afloat. Ships are visible upside down, in the sky; objects lying behind hills are heheld apparently lifted above them; lakes of gleaming water, surrounded by palm trees and refreshing vegetation, spring into view in the midst of sandy deserts; unknown cities, with towers and pinnacles, make their appearance suspended in the air; aerial animals appear, browsing in illusory pastures; processions of men and horses are seen, marching or galloping where no foot has ever trod—such are some of the recorded marvels that the mirage has produced.—Brooklyn Eagle.

EXPLAINING HAIL AND SNOW

Why One Is Hard and the Other Soft Is a Simple Matter to the Meteorologist.

Have you ever wondered why it should hail instead of snow? If you could examine the snowflake and a hailstone side by side, you would find a clue to the answer. In the case of the snowflake the water has turned into a number of tiny crystals, while the hailstone is nothing more than a ball of ice. The snow has been formed from water vapor, the hailstone is just frozen rain.

Meteorologists explain that in the upper air there is a huge quantity of water vapor floating about in the form of a colorless gas, and so long as the air does not become colder the water will stay as a vapor.

Air at a certain temperature can hold a certain amount of water in it in the form of water vapor. If the air becomes warmer it can hold more vapor, and if it becomes colder it cannot hold so much.

So, if the air, holding all the vapor it can, suddenly becomes colder, some of the water vapor in it has to be squeezed out in the form of drops of water. These fall to earth as rain.

If, when these drops of water have been squeezed out, there is a sudden rush of wind upward, the raindrops will be blown up with it into the higher regions where it is colder and the drops are frozen and form hailstones, which, directly the upward wind stops, fall.

Snowflakes form in a different way. If the air charged with water vapor falls to a temperature below zero, the water vapor will be squeezed out, not as water, but as ice, because the air is below freezing point. Ice that forms straight from vapor becomes tiny water crystals. These crystals as they fall stick together and form snowflakes.

Why He Values Shoe Trees.

"I never appreciated the advantage of shoe 'trees,' until this spring," said the economical chap. "Last fall I was induced to buy a pair of those wooden things that are slipped into one's shoes to keep them from wrinkling. I thought the practice a silly fad. However, I put them into a pair of low cuts and forgot them. One day I got out the shoes expecting to find them all curled up with the insoles hard and so twisted that it would take several days of agony to get them straightened out. Imagine my surprise when I pulled the 'trees' and slipped my foot into the shoes to find them almost like new ones. Why, I won't have to buy any new ones this summer. That's why I'm going around barking up shoe trees."

How Silhouettes Came Into Vogue.

Silhouettes were much in vogue before the introduction of photography, and have been revived in recent years. They were called after Etienne de Silhouette, the French minister of finance in 1759. His extreme parsimony in all matters of finance was caricatured everywhere and any cheap mode of fashion was sarcastically called by his name. About that time these profile pictures cut from paper were introduced. They were made by means of the light of a candle, the shadow of a face or figure being traced on the paper. Because they were cheap, they too were called by the name of the minister and silhouettes they have been ever since.

Why Wolf Must Be Kept Down.

It would seem that the wolf would be driven to extinction by the increase of man and the wide area of cultivated ground, which must have deprived him of much of his forest quarters. But instead the animal has kept pace, and when the hunter, his greatest enemy, ceased his activities for a time the wolf increased in enormous numbers. Guns will have to blaze mightily often to bring down this undesirable population to its normal size and also to stop the most undesirable of all immigration, the entrance of the Siberian wolf into our country.

Why Housewives Employ Acid.

Acids are coming into more common use for housekeeping purposes. The bathroom floor tiling can be cleaned with a weak solution of hydrochloric acid, or as it is commonly called, muriatic acid. This same acid used in a medicine dropper on an iron rust stain will remove the stain without damage, if the cloth is rinsed in weak ammonia. Label the bottle "poison," for even the mildest acids may be dangerous.

Recognized His Limitations.

The great dramatist of France, Corneille, was so absent and embarrassed in society that he wrote of himself a witty couplet, importing that he was never intelligible except through the mouth of another.

COMRADESHIP SPIRIT SHOWN

Minnesota Veteran Receives Wallet Lost During War and Found by British Soldier.

The spirit of comradeship between soldiers of the allied armies of the World War, as demonstrated by the formation of the International Veterans' association, of which the American Legion is a member body, has been shown in a number of instances.

One of the most interesting examples of this friendly feeling between comrades was revealed in the finding of the personal wallet of Francis E. Ellis, a veteran of St. James, Minn., by Bert Gocke of London, a former British soldier.

Ellis served with Co. M, 145th Infantry, toward the close of the war and was moving up with his company when the Germans were turning back through Belgium. He lost his wallet, together with his registration card and other personal memoranda on the trip. Recently he received a letter from Bert Gocke, under a London date line. The note read:

"I am sending you this wallet which I believe to be your property. I trust it finds you alive and in the best of health after the terrible strife we have been through."

"I don't know if you recollect traveling in some box cars through Belgium in the latter end of 1918. I, myself, being wounded on the Ypres front, was after a week or two, discharged from a dressing station and posted as a temporary guard on Vlammeleke station, where your train was unloaded. On finding your wallet, it has been my ambition since to forward it to you. I am inclosing a photo of myself. Possibly you saw me while your regiment was passing my post. . . . Trusting you will drop me a line, I am, yours sincerely, Bert Gocke."

Mrs. Madge King Johnston.

On one patriotic holiday, when it was made a part of a special program. Other ways of putting the composition before the public are being urged by Mrs. Johnston and through her efforts and those of other members of the committee, local units of the Auxiliary have received the endorsement of many civic, patriotic and fraternal organizations throughout the nation for the new song.

Mrs. L. D. Westfelt of New Orleans, who composed the song, turned over the plates rights and arrangements for publication of future editions to the women of the Auxiliary. She advanced considerable money for the initial work, but freely gave this word has just been received by Mrs. Johnston from New Orleans telling of Mrs. Westfelt's death shortly after landing from a trip to Egypt and the Mediterranean sea.

A letter received by Mrs. Johnston told of her pleasure at returning home, and of her intense interest in the progress of the song. Mrs. Johnston, in a message to national headquarters of the Auxiliary says: "We will now feel that our work is a sacred obligation bequeathed to us in fulfilling her desires to aid the boys in this way."

The song may be obtained in sheet music form, orchestration, band arrangements and on player piano rolls. All rights to the composition have been relinquished by the composer to the Auxiliary.

FORD HOSPITAL DOORS OPEN

Detroit Institution to Admit Disabled War Veterans Who Are in Need of Attention.

A personal plea from Alvin Owsley, national commander of the American Legion, to Henry Ford has resulted in hospitalization for 300 disabled war veterans of Michigan.

Ford has agreed to throw open the doors of his big hospital in Detroit to every disabled ex-service man and woman in the state following Commander Owsley's statement of the hopeless fight the Michigan veterans were making because the government failed to simplify the formal procedure through which applicants for hospitalization are forced to go and which has resulted in long delay in obtaining relief for the war fighters.

After hearing the Legion head's appeal, Mr. Ford immediately instructed the superintendent of the Henry Ford hospital to receive at once any man in need of hospital treatment who could produce proof of war service. The Ford hospital covers 20 acres in the heart of Detroit. It was used as United States general hospital No. 36 during and after the war.

Form Units of "Polar Bears" Members of the detachment of American troops who served in Russia during the World War are forming units of the "Polar Bears." These men include a number of prominent Legionnaires who were on duty in the frozen north while their comrades were in France. They find much to talk about, according to reports of their meetings. Hard tack at $10, cigarettes at $2.50 a package, nights in "pup" tents with the thermometer flitting around 30 below—these are among the topics of the former members of the A. E. F. in Russia. Units of the organization have been formed in Chicago and in Detroit.

Has Uniformed Legion Band. Brockton, Mass., American Legion members claim to have the only uniformed Legion band in the state. Twenty-eight musicians, all Legionnaires, compose the band. Nearly 30 per cent of them are overseas men.

Not Suitable for America. The convenient single stem receiver and transmitter type of telephone instrument used in Europe has been found unsuitable for use in the United States on account of long-distance communication, frequent in this country, according to the American Telephone company.

SONG OF LEGION AUXILIARY

"The Call of the Flag," Given to Organization by Author, Used in Americanism Campaign.

The patriotic appeal of the song, "The Call of the Flag," is to become one of the factors of the Americanism campaign which is being waged by the American Legion Auxiliary. This song, which has been adopted by the Auxiliary as its official composition, has a stirring air and possesses words which create a high enthusiasm among the hearers. The song was first heard by Legionnaires and Auxiliary members at the New Orleans convention, where it received the official endorsement of the Auxiliary.

Mrs. Madge King Johnston, national vice-president and chairman of the Americanism committee of the Auxiliary, plans to make wide use of the official song in the work which is being undertaken by the Auxiliary along the lines of Americanism. The song is now being distributed by the national organization of the Auxiliary through its departments and local units. Recent popularization of the song has been assisted by broadcasting from various radio stations throughout the country, particularly the first miller

Prehistoric man to appease his hunger plucked the wheat stalk and using his teeth for millstones ground grist for his stomach and so became the world's first miller.

Today our millers blend the finest of whole wheat with malted barley and make an appetizing, easily digested and delightfully flavored cereal.

DAIRYMEN FAVOR TESTING HERDS

The bovine tuberculosis eradication meetings held at Stone Ridge and Gardiner by the Farm Bureau and the Accredited Herd Association have been well attended and the sentiment expressed at both meetings has been strongly in favor of organized tuberculosis testing work in Ulster county. The dairymen, after hearing the situation explained, immediately realize the importance of eradicating the disease from their herds, not only from the standpoint of public health but from the selfish standpoint of having healthy cattle on their farms and clean healthy milk for their own families.

Following the final meeting at New Paltz June 15, the director of the association will take steps for the actual testing work to begin as soon as possible. From the interest indicated so far at least 60 herds will be ready for the test this summer.

ORIGINAL HOME OF VENDETTA

Family Feuds Began in Corsica, but the People Are No Longer Proud of the Fact.

Corsicans will doubtless welcome the death of the famous bandit Romanetti, but will resent the publicity that it brings them. They dislike having their island famous for its bandits and vendettas, instead of its beauties and its Bonaparte family.

The idea of bandits and blood feuds is as inseparably connected with the name "Corsica" as are bull fights with Spain. The only retaliation is the fact that the Corsicans and Spaniards, like most other Europeans, look upon America as peopled solely by cowboys and Indians who travel around madly in flivvers or on horseback and whose favorite amusement is shooting up the town. Instead of living in houses, we are supposed to inhabit monstrous buildings to which the French have given the picturesque name, "sky-scratchers."

Now, Corsica once earned its reputation as a land of feuds and bandits. It was the original home of the vendetta, or family feud, and it once was infested with many bandits. So, also, however, were parts of the United States once inhabited by Indians and roamed over by cowboys armed with six-shooters. But the Corsica of today is inhabited by a race of agriculturists, who raise fruits and olives and make excellent, very heavy wines, which, as a rule, are too delicate to export. Their habits are peaceable and they are a law-abiding folk, who spend a good deal of their spare time playing a game of cards that much resembles poker.

The bandit Romanetti met his death in a manner worthy of his predecessors; but it does not follow for this reason that a revival of banditry has commenced in Corsica. Do the antics of a drunken cowboy in a Western village justify the belief in Corsica that the Americans have reverted to the ways of the early frontier and that it is dangerous to go about unarmed?—New York Tribune.

Ancient Graves Found.

An important discovery to archeologists has been made almost within the boundaries of Glasgow. No fewer than twelve different burials, all within a small area of ground, were disclosed, some protected by tombs built of massive stone slabs. Each grave had its highly ornate pottery vase, decorated by geometrical incised lines, and at times with work in relief. The pottery, some of which, it is thought, belongs to the late Stone or Neolithic age, about two thousand to two thousand five hundred years before Christ, ranges in period down through the different sections of the Bronze age, until the termination of that age about seven hundred years before Christ. Among the items of personal property of the prehistoric people who were buried there are several tools of flint and other stone, a fine necklace of beads and a bronze knife dagger, with remains of its leather sheath.

The Completed Village.

Stopping in a small town, a traveling man said to a prospective customer: "It has been 20 years since I was here last. Many buildings gone up since then?" "No," replied the resident, "none that I know of." "Any new railroads or street cars?" "No." "Planning any improvements?" "No." "Well," said the traveling man, "I've been all over this country, and this is the first town I have seen that is what you might call actually finished."

Tracing Movements of Salmon.

In Alaska during the season 1922, 4,000 aluminum tags were attached to red salmon in traps located at various places on or near the Alaska peninsula. A considerable percentage of these were returned with data as to when and where they were taken. Doctor Gilbert of Stanford University, the foremost authority in the world on the life histories of salmon, will go to Alaska somewhat later to take part in this work, and it is expected that he will be accompanied by Mr. Henry O'Malley, commissioner of fisheries, who has also personally devoted much time to the study of Alaska salmon fisheries.

Author a Poor Talker.

Charles H. the witliest of monarchs, was so charmed with the humor of "Hudibras" that he caused himself to be introduced as a private gentleman to Punter, its author. The witty monarch found the author a very uninteresting companion, and was of the opinion, with many others, that such a stupid fellow could never have written so clever a book.

Furnishing the "New Home"

There is much pleasure and joyousness derived from selecting the wedding outfit, and being "the one" at the shower in honor of her approaching marriage, but the real, true pleasure comes with the outfitting of the new home to be.

What a joy it is to look at the new furniture, select a piece here and there that will just fit in that "corner" or decide on a dining suite of mahogany for the little dining room with the cute bay-window.

And then the "fun" of picking out rugs, and draperies that harmonize so well and lend an atmosphere of charm and dignity to the living room. And the porch, too, must not be forgotten, for that part of the house is now as important as any room.

And so, when you first think of the things you will need, remember that Luckey has everything for the home.

Avoid that Monday Morning Drudgery by Doing Your Washing Electrically

Your neighbor probably does hers in this way and is delighted with the results. There is no good reason why you should slave away at disagreeable, hard work when a machine will do it for you.

The time and energy that the washing machine will save can be more profitably employed in other directions. You can get a washing machine on very liberal terms and it will cost but little to operate.

The following firms are in position to furnish you a "Wash-O-Matic" machine.

Charles D. Miller

Charles D. Miller, of New York, it is reported, has been selected to be the National Republican Committee Chairman for the Presidential campaign in 1924. According to rumors in Washington, he has joined hands with President Harding, with whom he is said to be in perfect accord on the matter of the United States' entry into the World Court.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Van Kleeck Motor and Garage, Inc., held at the office of the company 8 North Front street, June 12, the following were elected as directors: Levi E. First Aid.
When traveling in a crowded street car, a man's first concern should be to put his feet where they will not be stepped on by the other passengers. The best way to do this is to suspend yourself from the straps in the manner of an African monkey doing his daily dozen in the treetops. Then you can get a first mortgage on a vacant seat by simply dropping into it.

When a middle-aged lady stands beside you, it is wise to become suddenly interested in your newspaper. She will swear softly at you in Sanskrit, but you can escape listening to her remarks by leaving the car and walking the rest of the way home.—Chicago American.

London Mayors.

The new lord mayor, who was recently installed into office, is the 723rd mayor that London has had, for the first mayor of London was appointed in the year 1189. From time immemorial the holder of this office has been called "lord mayor," and since 1254 he has been a "right honorable." He ranks as an earl, and is the representative of royalty in the civil government of the city.

FRANCE IS NOW RADIO LEADER OF OLD WORLD

Country Develops Its Commercial
Wireless Business Through Private Enterprise.

While the United States has been carrying on an intensive campaign in wireless broadcasting and the use of radio by amateurs, France has been hard at work developing its commercial wireless business through private enterprise. Today France has the largest, most efficient and most powerful wireless equipment in Europe. Unlike England, France took the opportunity during the war of developing this new means of communication.

Today the French government has four high-powered stations. Most Americans are familiar with the great Eiffel tower which rears its steel framework into the Paris skyline like a giant finger and snatches radio messages from around the world. It is in continuous contact with Arlington, near Washington, and all the other great American stations.

Next in importance comes the station at Nantes, which is allocated to the French navy; the station at Lyons, which was erected during the war and is used by the post office for communications to America, Africa, Europe and the French colonies; and the great Lafayette station, near Bordeaux, which was built by the American navy and later acquired by the French government.

The Lafayette tower sends daily communications to Madagascar, Martinique and Saigon. The government service consists of news, propaganda and official communications.

The chief wireless installation in France is now that of Ste Assise and consists of two stations, one for European traffic and one for world communication.

EXPERT SAYS NEXT WAR WILL BE FOUGHT WITH GAS

Col. J. F. C. Fuller, chief of staff of the British tank corps in the World war, has been looking with a military eye into the future and says he can see the time when "whole armies will be put to sleep." In a recent book which he has published he claims that gas will be the most humane method of warfare. A regiment that is sneezing or sleeping is hardly prepared to handle rifle or bayonet or to man the guns.

WAS BRIDESMAID 184 TIMES

Michigan Girl, Deputy County Clerk,
Happy to Serve Young Lovers.

Miss MacFarlane of Rossmore, Mich., has been a bridesmaid 184 times, but doesn't worry in the least, she says, about the old superstition that "Twice a bridesmaid and you never marry." For Miss MacFarlane is young and pretty.

Eager to wed and frequently overlooking many important details, young couples arrive at the courthouse with the license and the ring, but without witnesses.

Desiring a bridesmaid, the judge invariably sends down for Miss MacFarlane, a deputy county clerk, and she's never been known to fail.

Servants Cheap in Osaka.

The wages of servant girls in Osaka, Japan, have gone up 1800 per cent in thirty years. The pay of ten servants, printers, carpenters and coolies has gone up, in the same period of time, between 820 and 1200 per cent. In 1901 servant girls got an average of 85 yen, or about 42 cents a month. Today they are paid $7.50.

Wine Damages From Host.

Automobile owners who take friends for rides are responsible for their safety, according to a verdict at Beltsville, Md. Mrs. A. Shuman was awarded $8,000 damages from her friend, Mike Kanawski. Mrs. Shuman's husband was killed while riding with Kanawski.

A tiny Brookline girl sitting on the floor talking to her dolly was heard to say: "And our Heavenly Father will take care of us. . . . If we are good. . . . but then we're not always good. . . . and so we have to take care of ourselves pretty much."—Boston Transcript.

APPLE THINNING DEMONSTRATIONS

Demonstrations of apple thinning will be held throughout the fruit sections of Ulster county next week by the Farm Bureau. Prof. G. W. Peck, of the State College of Agriculture, has been secured for three days, June 19, 20 and 21. The schedule of the demonstration meetings is given below:

June 19—Melvin Churchwell, Ulster Park, 2 p. m., daylight time.
June 20—F. G. Carpenter, Plattekill, 10 a. m., standard time.
June 20—Mulford Hurd, Clintonville, 1 p. m., standard time.
June 21—Walter Clark (Moore Farm), Milton, 10 a. m., daylight time.
June 21—W. Y. Velie, Marlborough, 2 p. m., daylight time.

The problem of whether or not it pays a fruit grower to thin apples is an open question and one upon which even the best growers disagree. At each of these demonstrations a few trees will be properly thinned and the yields from them compared to the yields from unthinned trees in the same orchard. The records from these demonstrations should be an answer to the thinning question.

Chic Garden Hat to Be Summer Favorite

Midsummer will bring the charming hat. It is of mustard-colored French hosiery, with a rare flower trim in green and shrimp.

Silk and Linens for Three-Piece Dresses

Adapting fabrics to the style desired, rather than the style to the fabric is the policy apparently followed by one manufacturer in developing cotton dresses, notes a fashion writer in the Indianapolis News. In addition to the wash numbers which include dotted swisses, ratines, linens and ginghams, this house presents some semi-formal frocks of the sheer chiffon type that are decidedly wearable.

Three-piece dresses in silks and linens are an important item in this collection and particular attention has been given to the straight-line dress with accompanying jacket. The frock portions of these costumes endorse the sleeveless bodice and the jackets are of box coat delineation.

In contrast to the street numbers which favor the straight-line, simple treatment, one finds the summer dance frock shown in panels and undulating folds of the softest materials. Delicately printed chiffons are more prominent than Egyptian prints for street wear, and figured effects are produced mainly through the use of embroidery.

An imported swiss dress is rather interesting in a slate gray, with striped organdie sash of black and gray. Plaited puffed sleeves that drop barely below the shoulder are noted and a prominent sash fastens at one side.

The use of colored linen lace on a ratine frock is one of the typically distinctive notes found in this group of cottons. The lace color blends perfectly with the mottled tones of the ratine, and effective pipings of black leather mark the side opening and tailored buttonholes of this straight-line dress.

A gingham frock that rather cleverly simulates the bouffant lines of a silk dress uses silk embroidery to trim the border of its skirt, as well as the collar and short sleeves.

Linens dresses of the three-piece type are extensively embroidered and present a decidedly wearable collection of severely tailored numbers. Smart color combinations add to the interest of the embroidery which is generally worked in all-over designs.

Long and Full Skirt Not Liked in Paris

The moderately short skirt for the street has taken firm hold of feminine affections, observes a fashion correspondent in the Boston Globe. It has been found impossible to dethrone it. Many of the smartest and most distinguished Parisiennes have steadily refused to accept long and full skirts for the street. They reserve models of this order for garden parties, dance teas, and of course, for the evening. Very determined efforts have been made in Paris to bring in full skirts which passed the ankles—and this for walking. A good many foreign buyers snapped up these models because they were "something new," but the really well-dressed women in Paris, and on the Riviera, refused to wear them.

And now, at the opening of the summer season, one prominent designer is showing walking skirts which freely display the ankles and which are notably tight. Some of the latest models are cut with straight side seams, the hem measuring about one yard and a half, even less, and the fullness at the waist gathered into tiny folds. Some of the smartest of these models are cleverly slit up at one side, the material running under the "slit" a little way. All the street models were worn by very young and slender girls, who wore no corset of any kind, and who, I suspect, were clad in tricot combinations. Certainly there was no sign of a petticoat.

Rattan Chairs.

When chair bottoms of rattan become loose and baggy stand them in a tub and pour two or three kettles of boiling water through the woven rattan. Do this on a bright day and set the chairs in the sun. In a few hours the bottoms will be as tight and straight as when they were new.

Velvet on Hats.

Many of the new hats show velvet ribbon trimmings, which is a revival of a one-time popular vogue. These ribbons range in width from two to six inches and make a rich trimming. New straw and felt hats also show facings of velvet.

You will be thoroughly proud of the much-desired original "new" whiteness which is restored.

Notice, too, how these washings with P and G clear and preserve the freshness of colors.

Why Pand G keeps clothes so white

- 1 To begin with, it is white itself.
- 2 It dissolves completely in water of any temperature.
- 3 It makes clear solution which quickly penetrates
- 4 and loosens all dirt—thorough, not "strong."
- 5 It acts on the dirt, not on fabrics.
- 5 It rinses out entirely.

IN MIDDLE LIFE

Man Is Called Upon to Summon
Up Reserve Power.

Then is the Time That Opportunity
Seems Left Behind and Life
Holds Little More.

A biographer of Mark Twain asserts that the middle years were the time of his testing. By his power as a writer he rose rapidly. He was prosperous and happy in his home life. He faced a bright future, says a writer in the Arkansas Thomas Cat. Then came the crash of the publishing company in which he was heavily involved and by which he was challenged to prove his integrity. Mark Twain had conquered the giants of obscurity and poverty that beset him in his youth. He was now called upon to endure the secondary strains of middle life.

Biographers say that such an experience is not unusual. The middle years are the dangerous years for many men. The flush of the morning is over and the heat of the day has arrived. Opportunities have come and gone. Life has settled into a routine and a discipline. Habits have become fast and hard, and the unknown has little charm of mystery about it. Life is a challenge to youth. To those in middle years it often appears dull and monotonous, where duty has become mechanical and work is without great reward. Engineers say that bridges, which will sturdily respond to the impact of a heavy load, often sag and bend under the steady strains of wear and tear, wind and weather. The secondary strains are considered more serious than sudden shock. Human conduct is not altogether unlike this. Characters that do not bend under the sudden shock of adversity or poverty, wear down and lose their resiliency under the slow grind of the middle years. The primary strains stand revealed in sudden misfortune or disaster. The secondary strains inhere in dull routine and a general sobering of life. They are the little forces that often spoil the vines of accomplishment. They breed moods of indifference and moments of gloom. In middle life it is, therefore, imperative that individuals remember and summon William James' principle of reserves. This great American teacher demonstrated that most persons live on the mere surface of their power and never tap their reserves of energy. Great reservoirs of unused power are hidden away in the depths of the average human personality. This comes forth only upon demand.

The athlete's strength is shown not so much by spurts of accomplishment as by staying power. In moral athletics staying power proves the stout heart and brave spirit. When the secondary strains begin to operate, the reserves of human personality should be summoned. For only the strength of the whole man can withstand the constant wearing pressure of the middle years.

His Various Titles.

"That stoop-shouldered gent who just stepped in to set his watch," commented the landlady of the Petunia tavern, "is Lester Lobstock—or, I should say Prof., Judge, Col., Prof., Prof., Prof., Dr., Hon. and so forth, Lobstock.

"As the town undertaker and embalmer he is Prof. Lobstock, and as the ex-referee of a baby show he will continue to be Judge Lobstock to the bitter end. Being an auctioneer makes him a colonel; as a weather prophet he is bound to be another professor—he worked in a drug store at one time and is still a doctor. He leads the choir and used to practice osteopathy, and is therefore two more professors. He is chairman of the Civic League, and that makes him an honorable. He is so busy keeping his various titles from getting tangled that he told me lately he just naturally couldn't find time to play checkers more than twice a week, to save him."—Kansas City Star.

Official Proved Resourceful.

A knotty problem set before the Belgian minister of railways by a woman of Rennes, who, to follow her occupation, is compelled to travel a great deal, has just been brilliantly solved by him. The woman weighs 350 pounds, and she finds it impossible to squeeze through the door of an ordinary railway carriage. It was therefore necessary for her to apply for permission to travel in the baggage car. This permission has now been granted, but the minister made the woman sign an agreement that she will not claim damages for any injury that she may receive while thus traveling and that she will also allow herself to be searched each time before leaving the train.

Latin Words in English Language.
Nearly one-third of the words in the English language are of Latin origin. Anglo-Saxon was spoken in England until the coming of William the Conqueror in 1066. With the Norman invasion came the introduction of French into the English language. Several thousand of the French words were Latin with a few alterations. Later a still larger number of Latin words were introduced into the English language.

HAVE ODD TRYSTING PLACE

New York Museum of Art a Favorite
Place for Lovers to Murmur
"Sweet Nothings."

"Meet me outside Jerry's," says the downtown clerk to his paramours of the moment. If he works uptown he specifies "Hackett's" or "Brown's" drug store as the trysting place. These substitutes for the hotel lobby serve most particularly the Saturday lunch and matinee crowd, the New York Sun states.

There is another spot, considerably off the beaten track of Times square, which is used by the higher browed—the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Saturday afternoon at the museum is a busy time. It is a free day in two senses—a business half-holiday and a free admission day. The place swarms with parents and children, out-of-town visitors, foreigners from the lower East side and an occasional soldier or sailor. In this crowd the couple interested in each other is easily lost.

"Meet me at Parnassus' tomb," says he of the flowing locks to she of the bobbed hair. The Egyptian room is extremely popular just now in view of the recent discoveries at Luxor. Sometimes the pair really look at the objects about them before strolling out to the avenue. She may admire a bit of antique jewelry and he, knowing himself safe by some thousands of years, joins in her admiration. Or she may ask him if he really thinks that the ancient Egyptian woman was more beautiful than the modern American girl. He is indeed a poor specimen of manhood if he does not rise to this bait.

Another popular place is the Rodin gallery. It is easily found, which cannot be said of every collection in the museum. Here our couple may stand before the "Hand of God" and imagine they are the comingling figures within. Anything can be imagined by the light of the divine spark.

What spot so fitting for a trysting place as the hall of chivalry? Here knights in full armor arrayed bestride gayly caparisoned steeds and couch their lances for their sweet ladies' sake. The hall is quiet and little frequented, and an earnest conversation can be carried on without much fear of interruption or eavesdroppers.

He and she may merely meet and depart together immediately, or they may wander about for a half hour or so. In either case they have done their share in gratifying the trustees. They have helped swell the number of annual visitors to the museum.

Portable Concrete Safes.

Portable safes made of concrete without any iron or steel outside casing, are now in use in Germany, and are also being exported. These small safes are said to possess all the advantages in respect to their fireproof and insulating qualities that are possessed by large concrete vaults. Securely connected to an iron base are four upright corner pieces formed of rectangular iron plates stiffened with angle irons. These meet at the center of each side of the safe, and form continuous walls. Inside these walls similar corner pieces, secured to the base, form the interior lining of the safe. The space between these two iron walls is filled with reinforcing rods of various kinds. The concrete is poured so as to form a monolithic structure with outside concrete walls.

The man who lives fast soon finds out that happiness can not keep up with him.

It isn't probable that the world ever will be bound together by any universal language except the one money talks.

There are approximately 387 turquoise talkers to the square mile, and most of them begin with the words, "that reminds me."

A woman was admitted to an institution for the feeble-minded, recently. She said that she believed everything her husband told her.

As It Was In the Beginning.

Who was the wind and winsome coot That made poor Adam pull the boot And taste of that forbidden fruit? A Flapper.

This Cleopatra maiden fair For whom Caesar tore his hair, Who was this vamp so debonaire? A Flapper.

Who strokes the cops upon their nobles? And on their shoulders gently sobs While some swell find from them she robs? A Flapper.

Who is it spends their hard-earned kale? Who makes this planet a woeful sale? Who is more deadly than the male? A Flapper.

We do not agree with a lot of men who seem to think woman's place is in the dishwasher.

Imagination's Artful Mind.

It is astonishing how pretty the lonely girl you have never seen can look when she is softly talking nonsense to you through the telephone.—Boston Evening Transcript

Homemade Vases.
A young housewife who had two pretty plain-colored vases in her living room, one dark green and one light blue, explained to admiring friends how she had made them. They were merely wide-mouthed bottles of pleasing shape, which had been treated to a coat or two of ordinary paint. The idea might easily be elaborated by tracing in lead pencil a simple outline, perhaps a flower or conventional design, to be filled in with a contrasting color. Such vases may be made to harmonize with any furnishings.

CHARLES LYNCH IS DISCHARGED

In Greene County Court before Judge Talmadge Due To Failure To Describe Property Premises of Boarding House at Prattsville—Another Charged With Mullan-Gage Law Violation Discharged.

In the Greene county court on Wednesday, County Judge Talmadge dismissed the indictment at the close of The People's case against Charles Lynch, who was on trial for alleged violation of the Mullan-Gage law.

Lynch is a negro who formerly lived at Prattsville, where he conducted a boarding house for negro laborers employed on the Shandaken tunnel construction work. The sheriff of Greene county and several State Troopers visited the place armed with a search and seizure warrant. The Troopers found a bottle of liquor concealed in a bag of potatoes. The sheriff, who was keeping guard at the rear of the house, narrowly escaped being hit in the head by another bottle of liquor which was thrown through the screen of one of the windows of the house. The second bottle was undamaged and chemical analysis showed the alcoholic content of both bottles to be 42 per cent.

The search warrant was procured for premises described as being occupied and conducted by Mrs. Charles Lynch, and the testimony showed that the liquor was in the possession of Lynch, who was not named in the warrant. Because of failure to describe the premises properly and other irregularities, Judge Talmadge granted the motion made at the close of The People's case by Frank W. Brooks of this city, who appeared for Lynch, and dismissed the indictment and discharged the defendant. The case was tried last November when the jury disagreed.

In the case of The People against Morgan Cole, also charged with violation of the Mullan-Gage law, in having sold in his possession which contained more than one-half of one per cent alcohol, the jury deliberated a few minutes and rendered a verdict of not guilty. Cole was defended by John C. Welsh of Catskill. In both cases, District Attorney Charles G. Coffin appeared for The People.

ENOUGH COAL TO LAST 6,033 YEARS

Not Calculating Alaskan Deposits and Unexplored Areas.

EXPERT DECRIES PESSIMISM

If coal is consumed at the present rate, it will be 6,033 years before the available supply in this country is used up, despite the many recent gloomy predictions of approaching exhaustion, according to estimates compiled by R. Z. Virgin, editor of the Coal Trade Journal of Pittsburgh.

This is not taking into consideration the vast deposits that lie so deep beneath the surface that our present known mining methods are not suited to mining it. Neither does it take into consideration the vast deposits recently discovered in Alaska. These Alaskan deposits are available for shipment to the Western states.

Other fields not thoroughly explored and which contain coal deposits are Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and the Rocky Mountain section. These deposits will considerably swell the original estimates.

Mr. Virgin also points out that there doubtless will be a vast quantity of fuel saved by the development of water power and through recent discoveries of coal in other countries, which will be used to supply their needs and thus lessen the drain on this country's resources. He also shows that consumption and production are not now growing as they have in the last century. From 1820 to 1910 consumption growth ranged from 200 to 600 per cent. In 1920 the United States produced the largest amount of coal in its history, 580,000,000 metric tons of 2,204.6 pounds. The very latest estimates of the United States geological survey show there are now available 3,387,308,000,000 metric tons of lignite, sub-bituminous, bituminous, semi-bituminous, anthracite and semi-anthracite coal. If coal is consumed at the present rate of 886,000,000 tons a year, it may be expected to last 6,033 years.

Features of Distribution.
"An interesting feature not generally known is the fact that the United States produces 50 per cent of the world's output," says Mr. Virgin. "Great Britain produces about 25 per cent, Germany about 8 per cent, Austria-Hungary about 3 per cent, and France about 2 per cent. All other countries producing coal produce a combined tonnage of about 14 per cent. The distribution of this tonnage is roughly estimated as follows: Household consumers, about 10 per cent; industrial enterprises, about 2 per cent; railroads, about 28 per cent; public utilities and all other purposes combined, about 30 per cent."

Much has been accomplished by science and research in the recovery and reclamation of coal formerly thought of as waste. Thousands of tons of low grade coal have been washed, sized and treated in various ways so as to make its recovery a profitable business. In addition, research has proven that much low grade coal can be made of much value. Some waste coal, or rather known as "canal coal," has been the object of study at the United States bureau of mines experiment station at Pittsburgh. In a recent experiment in West Virginia under a Belgian process it was discovered that by heating freshly mined coal in an oven at low temperature it was made to yield ten gallons of gasoline per ton of coal treated. The residue of the coal was not used up by this process, and really very little of the coal's value as a fuel was lost.

Pulverizing Saves Coal.
"It has been demonstrated many times by government mining engineers that coal dust when mixed with air formed a very explosive mixture, especially when held in suspension in moving air currents within the mine or within the bunkers of vessels or power houses."

"Recent practice takes advantage of this fact. Coal is being pulverized and fed into the furnaces by mechanical stokers. This practice conserves coal, gives intense heat and is a cheap method."

"Within the United States are millions of undeveloped water horsepower going to waste yearly. Recent years show a very marked increase in the harnessing of these huge power possibilities. In the United States this increase is shown by activity in the development of the great potential power of the Colorado, Columbia and St. Lawrence rivers. The horsepower permits for proposed projects in 1921 and 1922 were 1,500,000 horsepower."

"If these huge hydroelectric generating plants are completed, the available water power fully utilized, and the industry's demand continues to increase in the same proportion (and all the indications point to even a greater demand), the saving of coal is estimated at 600,000,000 tons per year."

"With the possibilities of the foregoing practices spreading the lifetime of the present coal resources over a larger period of time, recent discoveries of coal in Siberia, Japan, China, India, Australia and New Zealand will no doubt fill the Far East markets in due time, and they would naturally and automatically be lost to the United States. This is but the natural outcome of business progress."

"It can be safely stated that alarming predictions of exhaustion of our coal are not founded on facts in the case."

SALE FOR BLIND REALIZED $854

And $948.70 Was Raised For Blind Widows. All Through Efforts of Devoted Church Women and Red Cross.

The sale of articles made by the blind people of the state, which was held in Kingston June 4 to 9 resulted in sales amounting to $854.23.

In addition the Minnie Houghtaling fund now amounts to $248.70, $50 of that amount having been contributed by the Ulster County Chapter of the American Red Cross through Mrs. Hayes. There are still some of the church committees to be heard from as to this fund, which will be kept open a little longer, in order that it may reach as large an amount as possible. Mrs. G. N. Wood, the secretary, who resides at 41 Brewster street, will be glad to receive any additional contributions to the fund as long as it is kept open. Sixty dollars of this fund was realized from the non-sectarian food sale conducted by the women of St. Joseph's Church on the instigation of Mrs. Hayes at the Van Wagenen store, last Saturday. As soon as the fund is closed, Mrs. Wood will publish a full report of the same, as she has done with the sale report which follows:

He Gave Her a Look.

While taking dictation the other afternoon I was busily jotting down little chicken tracks (as stenographers shorthand notes are often called) and in some way my right foot became tangled in the rung of my chair. I turned and turned, but I was caught fast. My foot refused to respond to my efforts to release it. I finally got desperate and removed my shoe, while my employer had his back turned, but did not accomplish my feat in time to escape his eagle eye.

Mr. Employer gave me one look and asked, "What's the idea?"

Such a performance naturally required an explanation and, of course, afforded my employer a good laugh, to my embarrassment.—Exchange.

Proper Way to Blow Nose.

He didn't know how to blow his nose. This is the reason given for the death of the Parisian actor, D'Aragon, a few days ago. Furthermore, it is asserted nine persons out of ten are just as ignorant. The explanation is that D'Aragon when blowing his nose pinched both nostrils, thereby blocking air passages and forcing the germs of grippe, from which he suffered, into the vessels leading to the brain. Meningitis resulted. The French press now warns the public to pinch only one nostril at a time and thus leave the other open for the escape of air and germs.

Find Morgan Horse Versatile on Farms

Records Furnish Evidence of Its Usefulness.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Some interesting information has just been made public by the United States Department of Agriculture regarding the registered Morgan horse Gladstone that won second place in the 1922 mounted service endurance ride. Gladstone's record corrects the impression that it takes years to develop a good saddle horse.

This horse was foaled April 13, 1913; sired by General Gates, a famous Morgan horse, and out of Minniehaha, a mare purchased by the government in the state of Washington. He was broken to single and double harness when four years old and shipped in 1917 to the government experiment farm at Beltsville, Md., where he was driven 20 to 30 miles a day for several years with another gelding. He was the first horse selected from the experiment farm to go to the stables of the secretary of agriculture in Washington, D. C., to replace horses that had grown foot-sore from use on the city pavements.

In June, 1922, Gladstone was returned to the United States Morgan Horse farm at Middleburg, Vt., to be prepared for the mounted service endurance ride. Here he was used during haying, raking hay in the fields, and at the close of the haying season was given his first continuous training under the saddle. The ride took place in October, and the little horse carried his rider and equipment, weighing 225 pounds, the 300 miles to a highly creditable finish. In the final rating Gladstone was but three points behind the winning horse. Twenty-one horses started the race and but nine finished. Gladstone was second and finished in excellent condition.

Within a week Gladstone was back at work at the United States Morgan Horse farm, where he is now being used every day in double harness.

Gladstone is a half-brother of Castor, the Morgan that made such creditable showings in the endurance contests of 1919, 1920 and 1921.

The records made by these horses in harness and under saddle, on the road and at farm work, and as successful contestants in one of the hardest rides ever staged for saddle horses, furnish additional evidence of the versatility and all-round usefulness of the Morgan horse.

Poultry Manure Rich in Nitrogen If Protected

Poultry manure is particularly rich in nitrogen, but if not protected it rapidly loses this valuable plantfood element, and this means a loss to the indirect income from farm poultry which might well be conserved for the farm.

For the garden, a farmer may balance the product by taking 30 pounds poultry manure and adding to it ten pounds dry loam or absorbent, such as peat moss or shavings, 16 pounds phosphoric acid and eight pounds kainite. The analysis of this mixture is 1 1/4 per cent nitrogen, 4 1/2 per cent phosphoric acid and 2 per cent potash. For such vegetable crops as lettuce, which require a higher content of nitrogen for forcing rapid growth, a greater proportion of poultry manure may be used in the fertilizer, or this mixture may be used and supplemented with a top dressing of nitrate of soda to the trucking crop. The dry loam or the peat moss prevents the fertilizer from becoming sticky, which would be the case if the phosphoric acid and kainite were mixed alone with the droppings to prevent the escape of nitrogen.

Thorough Study Must Be Given Modern Beekeeping

The keeping of bees is an ancient branch of agriculture, yet modern beekeeping is a new thing. Many persons still erroneously think that bees work for nothing and board themselves, and that to keep bees he simply gets some bees and allows them to roam where they will. The present-day beekeeper controls the development of the colony population so as to have a full force of gathering bees at the right time, and then prevents a division of this force by swarming. By these and other methods he greatly increases the amount of honey gathered. The modern skilled beekeeper finds bees far more productive than did his predecessors because of his ability to change conditions and adapt them to the natural habits of the bees.

Control Melon Aphid With Nicotine Sulphate

The melon aphid is also known as cucumber aphid. It attacks the under side of the leaves causing curling. Late melons, cantaloupes and cucumbers are especially liable to attack.

Nicotine sulphate at the rate of one-half pint to two and one-half pounds of soap in 50 gallons of water applied when the aphids are first seen is the remedy. Use a spray nozzle with an angle so the under side of the leaves may be sprayed.

Tractors Given Service and Repair Are Favored

Corn-belt farmers who own tractors say that the well-known makes of machines for which repair and service can be promptly obtained and which are operated efficiently, have usually been found reliable, according to government investigators.

TRUE TO MASTER

Dog's Fidelity Greater Than Desire for Life.

No Temptation Could Lure Him From Guardianship of Body of Man He Loved.

"Dog!" used as an epithet applied to a human is a "fighting word." But after having read in a California daily a news item of Bob, I feel that the term should no longer bear insult.

Bob was a common Alredale terrier, but his story shames numerous pages of human history. He is not an ordinary tale of fidelity unto death; it is different.

Bob's master and a companion went for a hunt along the edge of the Mojave desert. Days passed, yet they did not return home. When a searching party came to the end of the trail in their little camp both hunters were dead. There had been a tragedy. Only Bob knows what happened, but circumstances seem to lead to the belief that his master had accidentally shot his companion in the back, then, in a moment of anguish, put the rifle to his own head.

Bob was left alone with the dead. Although he was an expert hunter, he could not leave his silent master even to catch one of the numerous rabbits scurrying through the brush. Soaring lazily in the blue above watched a vulture. He knew that Death had passed. Already on the ridge above the camp two coyotes licked their chops in anticipation.

Five days and five nights Bob kept the complaining birds and beasts from their feast.

When the searchers came up, a dozen vultures swished out of the brush and the coyotes slipped over the ridge. Bob was whining near his master's ear; he had grown too weak to stand.

Yes, Bob's story was different: he was faithful after death.

Only fifty miles from the scene of this tragedy history records one greater. Less than fourscore years ago a party of men, women and children, crossing the mountains, stayed hunger with the flesh of their fallen comrades. Had Bob done likewise the rescuers would undoubtedly have shot him ignominiously. But he had not imitated man.

Since Bob was only a dog, why did he not satisfy his hunger as have numerous explorers and shipwrecked sailors? Or, why did he not abandon his silent companions to chase the taunting desert rabbit which he could have outdistanced with ease?

Since Bob cannot make known his thoughts to man, no one will ever know just why he suffered hunger while there was abundant food in sight.

"Dog!" A term meaning fidelity even after death.—George Ballard Bowers in Our Dumb Animals.

Mother-in-Law Says:

"I thought for a while yesterday that Harold was going to get out to the golf course alone, but just as he was leaving, Minnie's new trousers were delivered.

"Lamech and I lived happily together many years, but he never played a game of any kind after we were married except one. We went to the Volunteer Firemen's picnic and he played baseball for two or three minutes. He was laid up four days.

"Minnie's husband works harder at his play than he does at his job. Lamech used to watch the weather signs to keep from losing his crops. Many's the time his rheumatic knee has given him warning to get the hay in off the south forty. In the spring and summer Harold reads the forecasts to see if the weather is likely to be bad enough to make him go to the office.

"Of course, Minnie makes him take his recreations seriously. I've noticed a woman who can wear sport clothes usually advocates golf for her husband. But if Minnie isn't any better swinging a club than she is a broom it is a waste of good all-wool cloth to put her on the links."—From Life.

LIGHT O' LAUGHTER

By JANE GORDON

(C. 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

"AND I wish," said Gordon Dare's mother, "that while you are on this trip you'd stop over at Glenmore and look up my old friend's daughter. Now, please do not demur, Gordon; this is an unusual request. A duty left undone by myself which has long troubled my conscience. May I tell you about it?"

The tall, dark-haired young man smiled his willingness. "But, mother," he objected, "you know how I detest these old calls of past memories. I am out for relaxation from wearisome daily conventions. Nevertheless, if that tender conscience of yours is bothering—"

"I may be able to make you understand my sense of responsibility in this matter," Mrs. Dare replied, "for I have neglected Rosalind's daughter all these years. But at the back of my memory has ever been a picture that would not be banished—the picture of a great, stately room in an old mansion on the Hudson river, and in a curtained bed my little friend, Rosalind, dying. Like some hurt child she lay, and turned her tired blue eyes to me.

"Hester," she begged, "you will see that they make my baby happy. She is such a tiny thing—no larger than my last doll. I would have my little daughter the very light of laughter—so I had planned, had I been spared. I have suffered in my husband's home; he so misunderstanding, his mother fretful—cold. And his proud old father—Oh, Hester, when you brought your fine gentleman to meet me, when Garth Stephens fulfilled your ambitious desire and married your humble friend, neither you nor I could see the days of gloomy forbearance ahead. I can only be glad that they were but days and months, not years. My little one—how will she grow in such a shadow-garden? I would have her happy, as I was happy and gay of heart in grandfather's cheery cottage, far up in the hills. So I shall leave for her the name of 'Gay.'"

I went as often as I might to visit Rosalind's child after her mother's death. But the visiting was not as easy of accomplishment as one would expect. The grim, dominating grandmother, guarded jealously—one might say spitefully—her son's daughter. She would brook no meddling from outsiders. And Garth Stephens was, as always, quietly acquiescent to his mother's management. The old man—Miser Stephens, some called him—ignored me in a manner that I could not overlook, even while carrying out my promise to Rosalind. This motor trip of yours, Gordon, will take you almost to the gates of Glenmore. Will you bring me news of my dear friend's daughter? And if you find her as sorrowful in the shadow of that gloomy family as my little Rosalind was sorrowful will you try to persuade them to allow her to come to me for a visit? I would eagerly write the invitation."

Gordon frowned over the thought of his disagreeable task as his car drew up before the gates of Glenmore. He smiled as the gates were thrown wide by an aged servant. Beyond the white-haired servant sat an old, bent gentleman—gentleman in every detail of manner and clothing; and at the old gentleman's side sat, on the marble bench, a wrinkled old lady.

"Sir," asked the old gentleman, "your name?" And when Gordon had given it, with the name of his mother for reminder, the old lady sent the old servant in search of Garth Stephens. He came soon, courteous in greeting.

Then, down the flower-bordered path, toward them all, came a light, dancing figure. She wore a white frock and carried in her arms roses which she had gathered. The young girl's lips curled delightfully at their red corners. Her blue eyes glanced at the visitor, and in their depths shone a merry twinkle.

Gordon Dare caught his breath; he had not believed in love at first sight. Now, his one desire was to keep this lively, happy vision close, that he might bring forth that radiant smile—that he might gaze, his troubles forgotten, in the warmth of those clear blue eyes.

Garth Stephens spoke gently: "This," he said, "is my daughter, Mr. Dare—our very light of laughter. Years ago this was a gloomy old place enough; and we were badly needing sunshine. Then Gay came to us to bear with us, to brighten us."

"Father!" cried the daughter, rosy and confused.

"He always will talk that way," she indulgently told the visitor. But some time later, as the visitor lingered long in the town of Glenmore, Gay refused the invitation sent by Gordon's mother, with this explanation: "They need me in this big, dreary house, to keep them happy. The two dear grandparents will not long be with us. I have my mother's last will to carry out—to the end. Shall I tell you? When I was a very little girl I found this note in a golden locket she left for me: "My little Gay—so I name you. For I would give you, if I might bestow it, a life of pure happiness, that you yourself might be a very light of laughter."

"And so, you see, how, then could I be happy were I not making others so?" "And that," said Gordon Dare, slowly, "is your reading of your mother's wish? Then, dear heart, I shall never know happiness again apart from you. Will you give me—some time—the sunshine of your presence forever?" "That time," answered Gay, softly, "will be the fulfillment of my happiness."

JOHNSON STILL IS SPEED KING

What American league pitcher has the most speed? If that question was put to the American league umpires a majority of them would be certain to reply, Walter Johnson.

Such being the case, why is it Johnson no longer strikes out so many men and finds it difficult to win with any degree of consistency?

"The reason is easy," remarked one of Ban Johnson's umpires in discussing the speed king's status.

"While Johnson still is as fast as any pitcher in the American league he is far from being as fast as he once was. The players know this, and no longer need fear the terrific speed that once featured Johnson's pitching. Instead of having one foot free they get a toe hold, to use the slang of the ball field, and take a healthy swing. It's just that slight difference that gives the batsman the added confidence that means so much."

The photograph shows Johnson and his two sons Walter, Jr., and Eddie. These two boys are following right in their father's footsteps, spending their vacation period following Dad around the circuit learning the fine points of the game.

Tim Hurst Was Handy in Using His Fists

Have you heard the one about the late Tim Hurst and a bullying player?

It happened many years ago, when fights in baseball were almost as common as bats and gloves.

"Ump" Tim, as picturesque as they come, a strange combination of pugnacity and humor, reversed another umpire's decision. The bully rushed up, and yelled: "I'll knock your teeth down your throat, you blankety-blank bum. I'll get you after the game."

Hurst walked up to him, hitched up his trousers, and said quietly: "Remember, that's an appointment."

The fellow didn't keep it. Tim had as great a "rep" for using his fists as for calling balls and strikes.

Tilden and His Protege

William Tilden, world's champion of the tennis court, and his fifteen-year-old protegee, Sandy Weiner, defeated the Alonzo brothers of Spala in the Chevy Chase tournament before a large crowd of notables including President and Mrs. Harding on the White House courts.

Diamond Squibs

The Pittsfield club has released the veteran Eddie Zimmerman.

The Rockford club has sold Pitcher Joe Eddleman to Flint of the Flint league.

The umpire is always wrong when Heinie Groh is called out on strikes. Heinie's glare proves it.

The two George Burneses are having a good session with the bat and bid fair to keep up their stick work.

The age of miracles produced few things more awe-inspiring than a successful steal of home.

The Pittsburgh Pirates released Arthur Stone, a recruit pitcher, to the Hartford club of the Eastern league.

Recent big league baseball scores indicate that not all the sandlot baseball is played on the sandlots.

Manager Jackson of the Bloomers recently closed a deal for the optional purchase of Pitcher Eberhardt from the Beaumont, Texas league club.

Stuffy McInnis may be about due for the discard, but his work this season doesn't show it. Stuffy has made a big hit in Beaumont.

Henry Huester, Baltimore sandlot southpaw, has been signed by the Mackmen. He is twenty-three years old and stands 6 feet 1.

Bill Powell, veteran who managed the Flint team last year, has retired from baseball again and has joined a real estate selling agency.

Vern Blenkinson was pretty good in the Central league last year, but this season, with Bloomington in the Three-I, he is setting a pace that is nothing less than sensational.

Alcohol of Acorns. Up to the present time no industrial use has been made of acorns, but recent experiments show that alcohol can be made from them. Shelled acorns contain about 40 per cent of starch, which can be readily saccharified and then converted into alcohol.

Warning Handed Father Bill Daly by Steward

Father Bill Daly was notified by the Jamaica stewards recently to outfit his apprentice jockeys with the right sort of equipment for the horses they are to ride in the future. It is a long time since Bill had the best lot of apprentices and the cleverest finished riders in the country, but the old man is still trying, though his stable has dwindled a lot since the days of Prince George, for which Richard Croker gave him $15,000; Lizzie, Bronzematte and other good ones.

Queen Elizabeth Ardent Devotee of Golf Sport

Queen Elizabeth of Belgium has become an ardent devotee of golf. She had links laid out in the park at Lasne, where she plays almost every day. Prince Leopold also plays frequently with his mother and has become very fond of the game. The royal patronage has led to the building of several new courses in Brussels and Antwerp and has increased sales in the athletic goods stores.

Golf Star Says Italian Will Be Next Champion

In a letter to a friend in Great Britain, Alexander Armour, the Scotch golfer, now making his home in this country, wrote: "Mark my words, the golfer of the future in the United States will emanate from the Italian. Ninety per cent of the caddies in New York are Italian boys, and believe me, there are some wonderful golfers among them."

Hot Argument Settled by Herman's Long Drive

Battering Babe Herman, "the Dixie Bomber," is causing a lot of talk in the Southern league on account of his home-run hitting. The Atlanta first sacker provoked discussion in Mobile the other day when the Crackers were playing there. Some contended that he was a "wild pitch" hitter, others that he was a regular guy up there at the bat. About the time the discussion was on the "Babe" busted one over the right-field wall and the eyes were the argument.

The Area of the Earth. The latest measurements give the area of the earth as 57,254,000 square miles of land, which includes lakes and rivers and 130,225,000 square miles of sea, a total of 186,540,000 square miles.

Don't Like Shaw's Plays.

Somehow Mr. Bernard Shaw's plays have never won the considered laurels of the French, but as a current writer of English he is fourth favorite with them. Moreover they read his plays, thinking them better perhaps that way than to look at. They tackled his recent "Back to Methuselah" with eagerness, just as they have been delighted in Mr. John Galsworthy's "Forsyte Saga" gathered into one volume.

Mr. Galsworthy's French audience is perhaps select rather than large, but it gives him fifth place in this considered census. Maybe Mr. W. J. Locke, if he were less modest, could compete for the fifth place, but it would be on a different basis.—London Graphic.

Clocks 3,000 Years Old.

Casts of two ancient Egyptian water clocks have been presented by the Egyptian government to the Science Museum, South Kensington, England. One of the clocks comes from Karnak, and dates from the reign of Amenhotep II, 1,400 years before Christ. The other is from Edfu, in the Ptolemaic epoch. From an examination of these clocks and the scale of measurements recorded on each it appears that the "hour" of that remote period was of variable length, being one-twelfth of the length of the day or night of the particular time of the year. A study of these ancient timepieces is considered important in the comparison of astronomical observation.

LAWSUIT LATEST SIOUX WEAPON

Surprising Evolution in Method of Fighting.

ONCE LANDLORDS OF THE WEST

Arrows—rifles—suits-at-law.
This has been the somewhat surprising course of evolution in the weapons with which the Sioux Indians have arrayed themselves against the whites, points out a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society, in regard to the tribes which have just brought court action against the Federal government for hundreds of millions of dollars, claimed to be due them in payment for their "old homestead."

"It is probable that the Sioux would win easily in a vote to determine which Indian tribe is most widely known," says the bulletin. "With the possible exception of the much less generally known Ojibwa, it is the largest tribe of American Indians north of Mexico."

"But this has not been the only factor in making us familiar with the Sioux. The Sioux of today are plains Indians; and although our great-grandfathers knew the forest Indians of the East all too well, it is the exploits of the tribes from whom the West has hardly been won that lie freshest in the memory of the living generations. The main body of the Sioux, too, lay in the northern prairie regions across which led the route of the greatest westward trek of the pioneers, whether they were bound to the soil of Iowa or far beyond to Oregon and California."

"Finally the unforgettable names and the dramatic incidents that the history of the Sioux has yielded, are sufficient alone to give them a prominent place whenever Indians are the subject of thought. Red Cloud, Crazy Horse, Rain-in-the-Face, and the redoubtable Sitting Bull, were Sioux. The Sioux have had a greater hand at furnishing our best known geographic names than any other division of Indians. 'Dakota,' 'Minnesota,' 'Nebraska,' 'Omaha,' 'Arkansas,' 'Kansas,' 'Iowa,' and 'Missouri' are a few examples, most of them the names of Siouxan subtribes."

Call themselves "Dakotas."
"A number of students of the American Indian agree that the stock originated in the forest region near the Atlantic coast.
"The Sioux call themselves 'Dakotas.' 'Sioux' is a contraction of a French corruption of an Ojibwa word meaning 'little snakes' or 'enemies.' Until comparatively recently the Sioux have been consistent enemies of the new Americans."

"By the first great treaty between the United States and the Sioux, made in 1825 at Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin, the territory of the Sioux was defined as lying mainly to the west of the Mississippi river, and including a tremendous area covering roughly one-half of the present Minnesota, two-thirds of the Dakotas and considerable portions of the present states of Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri and Wyoming."

"In 1837 came the first big sale of territory by the Sioux when they disposed of all claims to territory east of the Mississippi. In 1851 they sold the greater part of their holdings in Minnesota. Delay on the part of the government in carrying out its part of the agreement aroused discontent among the Indians and in 1857 they massacred settlers near the Minnesota-Iowa border. This was followed in 1862 by the terrible Minnesota massacre in which nearly 1,000 settlers lost their lives. As a result of this uprising the Sioux were driven out of Minnesota and pushed farther west. For the next six years they were continually on the war path."

"A period of peace followed the treaty of 1868 which was unbroken until white miners, attracted by the discovery of gold, invaded the Black Hills in the seventies. Efforts to induce the Sioux to go on reservations were resisted by Sitting Bull who, with thousands of followers, trekked farther westward. In 1876 his band surrounded Custer's command of several hundred United States cavalrymen on the Little Big Horn and massacred them. Sitting Bull escaped to Canada and soon after this all Sioux of the United States were living on their great reservation embracing all of South Dakota west of the Missouri river as well as areas in adjoining states."

Reservations Reduced.
"The history of the Sioux from that time onward has recorded the reduction of their reservations. In 1880 a treaty was made reducing the great reservation by one-half, and dividing what remained into five smaller reservations. Sitting Bull was pardoned, returned to the United States and resumed life with his people on a reservation; but in 1890-91 he took part in disturbances of a semi-religious nature and while resisting arrest was killed by a peace officer. On this occasion a different sort of massacre took place, the victims being about 300 Sioux."

"Since the outbreak of 1890-91 the Sioux have not again resorted to arrows or tomahawks or rifles in their contests with white men. But that they mean to keep up the fight with the more peaceful weapons of civilization is shown by their demand for a day in court."

Gives That Impression.

Maud—"What a beautiful new gown Helen is wearing. Says it's imported, doesn't she?" Marie—"Not exactly in those words. It's her last season's dress; the dressmaker has turned it inside out, and now she says it's from the other side."—Boston Evening Transcript.

Writers Not Conversationalists.

Addison, whose classic elegance has long been considered the model style, was shy and absent when with people. In conversation, Dante was taciturn and satirical. Gray and Aldrich seldom talked or smiled. Rousseau was remarkably true in conversation, without a word of fancy or eloquence in his speech. Milton was unsocial and sarcastic when much pressed by strangers.

Witches.

Witches became officially dead by an act passed in George II's time, but pretending to exercise witchcraft was made a punishable offense. The last execution for witchcraft in England took place in 1716, when Mrs. Mikes and her daughter were the victims. The last in Scotland were in 1722, and the act referred to was passed six years later.—London Tit-Bits.

Oldest College Magazine.

St. John's college, Cambridge, England, can claim to possess the oldest college magazine in the world. This was the Eagle, which was founded in 1833, and which included among its first contributors Samuel Butler, the author of "Erewhon." Titus Oates, Roger Ascham, Ben Jonson and Wordsworth were all students at St. John's.

PERTAIN TO MEN AND MULES

Only Known Animals That, Willingly and Unwillingly, Are Known to Wear Collars.

Collars are tabular articles of apparel worn about the neck by men and mules. The reason that the last named animal wears them is obvious. A collar consists of several square inches of linen made into a strapping noose and starched to add to its potency. Some are upright, other grande and still others simply instruments.

They are of varying heights, according to the hardness of the wearer, observes a writer for the New York Sun. Some men are so hardboiled that they wear collars with protruding points in front and play a game with them. The object of the game is to prevent the points from working through the under jaw and destroying the molar. Fortunately the collar does not often win and the stretching exercises incidental to the play are beneficial.

Many good farmhands have been ruined because of a burning ambition to wear a collar perennially. The problem of the exodus to the cities might be solved by a public exposure of the implement. For some reason office slavery is called white-collar work and those who do not carry the hod are said to be white-collar workers, but this is only a flowery figure of speech, the collar that will stay white on the job not having been made.

In families the men of which have worn collars for generations that unlovely protuberance known as Adam's apple is virtually nonexistent. Among those who have but recently joined the collar corps the old perambulating pip-pip puts up a hard fight, but is finally pushed back, to the evident discomfort of the windpipe. It is fortunate that only the air passage suffers and never the one through which food must travel.

ODD VARIETIES OF MEDICINE

Cobweb Pills Supposed Good for Ague, and Snake's Head Broth for Various Diseases.

The heads of venomous serpents have held an important place in medicine. A strong broth made from them and mixed with salt and spices, and one hundred other remedies, was employed under the name of theriac as a cure for every conceivable disease.

Curious survivals of this old belief in the efficacy of certain reptiles and insects as cures for human ills occasionally come to light, even in this advanced age. In New England, cobweb pills are supposed to be good for the ague, and in the South a certain knuckle bone in a pig's foot is a cure for rheumatism. If it be carried in the pocket or worn suspended from a string around the neck.

The spider-web pill originated in China, where all species of insects have certain positive or negative values in medicine.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Nature.

Nature, the most blessed of all things, is not vengeful. God forgives. And nature is God. It is God that lives in the rose, in the violet, in the tree, just as He lives in the heart of man. It is God that breathes in the grass which makes the earth sweet to tread upon, and it is God that lives in the song of the birds.—James Oliver Curwood in Isak Walton League Monthly

A Great Trio.

"Next to godliness and cleanliness, cheerfulness is the third great duty of man."—Joseph H. Choate, Boston Transcript.

Although he is opposed to colleges, Thomas A. Edison, the electrical wizard, sent his son, T. M. Edison, through Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in Boston. Young Edison is shown here receiving his degree as electrical engineer from President Samuel W. Stratton. Edison left at once for his father's plant in Orange, New Jersey, where he got a job without having to answer the famous Edison questionnaire.

Smallest Letter.

What surely must be the smallest letter to cross the Atlantic arrived in London recently. It was a Christmas greeting cut with a diamond on a glass slide, the writing occupying the 1-13,000th part of a square inch. The greeting contained 59 words, and in addition a beautifully drawn picture of the sea and an island with trees, with the sun shining above it, the whole being surrounded in an ornamental border. Each word is quite distinct under an objective glass.

Dye Makes Choice.

A remarkable new dye has been discovered that will select which piece of material it will dye and which it will not. By this means a white material can be placed in a bath of dyestuffs and dyed two colors in one operation. Thus, a mixed material of cotton and artificial silk placed in a bath of the new dyestuff will come out with the cotton threads dyed blue and the silk fibers dyed red, yellow or orange, according to the particular dye used.

Fighting Frost in California.

Frost prevention is an ever-present problem with the orange growers of California. A dependable system of frost prevention would be of immense value to them. Recently a system has been developed which shows great promise. The plant consists of a central heating furnace. Oil is fed under pressure from a supply tank to the burners by a small motor. A thirty-horse power motor is attached to a blower which draws the air into the heating chamber and forces it out through the distributing pipes. These pipes are of concrete, varying in size from ten inches at the furnace down to three inches at the point of delivery. Vertical galvanized pipes with distributing caps deliver a stream of hot air directly under each group of four trees. The temperature of the air at the point of delivery is approximately 400 degrees Fahrenheit, and dampers control the amount of air delivered. The inventor claims that his equipment can displace the cold air in an orchard with warm air to a height of ten feet in about fifteen minutes.

Two others on road from Kingston to Monticla, on Overlook Mountain.

Mr. Andrews also supplies this list of camp sites with fireplaces in Green county.

Six miles south of Tannersville, at Devil's Kitchen, in Plattekill Gorge.

Three miles north of Hunter on road to Hensonsville.

At Silver Lake, near East Windham.

One mile east of South Durham, on the road to Cairo.

One mile east of Lexington on the road to Hunter.

These sites can be located with the Slide Mountain, Neversink, Phoenixia, Kaaterskill and Durham sheets of the United States Geological Survey.

Mr. Andrews is now working on new trails in the section north of Esopus creek covering Hunter Mountain, Spruett, Hunter Village, Lanesville, Elka Park, south to Tremper Mountain, which he expects soon to have cleared and marked. Some of the trails up Hunter Mountain, are already equipped with Conservation Commission signboards and metal disk markers.

Cocoon Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Multisided cocoon oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this cannot possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. Two or three teaspoonsful of Multisided will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Multisided cocoon oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure and ask for "Multisided."

The Lowly Thatched Cottage. We sing it, a hundred years after, but the nearest we come to a "lowly thatched cottage again," is a bungalow at $8,500 and all the modern improvements.

Anything resembling a thatched cottage that man dwells in is the shack in the woods where he goes for his summer vacation, and the brief tarrying he does there only emphasizes the necessity for a bathtub, electric light and "hotel mattress" repose.

Few of us have seen a real thatched cottage.

It is only in literature for us, and British literature at that. Even John Howard Payne's home, still in existence, was shingled. But we feel that we could scarcely get up a surge of the pulse over "My heart with rapture thrills, beneath those cottage shingles."

No, John Howard Payne was right. He was as right as a genuine poet is always. The romantic verbiage of poetry is its own; and to fit it to the prosaic specifications of exactitude would spoil it utterly. It is the lowly thatched cottage forever.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Could Take It as He Pleased. The irate customer shook his portrait in the photographer's face.

"Do I look like this picture? The thing's an outrage! Why, you've given me an awful squint and the look of a prize-fighting bully. Now, answer me, and no nonsense about it! Do you call that a good likeness?"

The photographer scanned the print, then looked at the customer. "The answer," he said, "is in the negative."

And the customer went away with a look of deep thought on his face.

Time's Changes.

The hired man was tinkering around the farmyard. The patient chum man gave him a cheap cigar and asked him how things were coming along.

"Different times," growled the hired man, "different times."

"What's the trouble?" asked the chum agent.

"I used to enjoy giving an apple to a horse."

"And now?"

"Well, I suppose the tractor is glad to see the oil can, but it never whistles with joy."

Irish Opera by German. It is strange that one of the most "Irish" of Irish operas should come from a German musician, but it is nevertheless a fact that the typical Irish opera, "The Lily of Killarney," was composed by a German, Julius Benedict. But Benedict, says the Morning Post, was a clever man, and the Irish idiom in its broad aspect is easy to assume. While speaking with an Irish accent he said many beautiful things, and the airs "Eileen Mavourneen" and "I'm lone" would give distinction to any opera that dealt in melody, and sixty years have not dimmed the charm of Benedict's melodies.

Strange Experience. Many years ago, while living in a certain western city, our neighbors were aroused one night by a burglar entering their bedroom window. He demanded $300, and after receiving it sat in the window and chatted with the man while his frantic wife sat in bed, speechless. Just before leaving he said that in three years he would return the money. He then jumped out of the window and disappeared into darkness. Three years passed and the money was returned.—Chicago Journal.

SIX AMERICANS AMONG WORLD'S 10 RICHEST MEN

Henry Ford Leads Them All, With John D. Rockefeller Second.

MYSTERY MAN LEADS EUROPE

Twenty years ago there was a man named Ford in Detroit, a mechanic, who had a part interest in an automobile company whose capital was $28,000. Today Henry Ford is probably the richest man in all history, with a net business income of $119,000,000 a year, which if taken on the basis of 6 per cent interest represents a potential capital of $2,390,000,000, says the New York Times.

What man living today comes nearest to Ford in riches? What ten men are the wealthiest in the world? Ask the man in the street and he will suggest Rockefeller, Morgan, perhaps another obvious name or maybe two. But begin even a cursory analysis of any such list, weighing more or less definitely known facts with the opinion of bankers, appraisers, brokers, statisticians, travelers, and others who can do more than make wild guesses and the result is a list that contains more than one surprise.

In truth, it is impossible to set down ten names and say: "These ten are the world's wealthiest in the order given" because each name to be qualified for such a roster must represent more than $100,000,000, and in dealing with fortunes of such bulk accuracy becomes increasingly difficult in geometrical ratio. The world has more than ten men in the $100,000,000 class. The name of one of America's richest men, T. B. Walker of Minneapolis, is virtually unknown in Wall Street, and the financial rank of others, notably George F. Baker, has never been realized by the public.

Here is a list of men who are credited in authoritative circles with possessing more wealth as individuals than any other group on earth:

Henry Ford—$550,000,000

John D. Rockefeller—$500,000,000

The Duke of Westminster—$150,000,000 to $200,000,000.

Sir Basil Zaharoff—$100,000,000 to $125,000,000.
Hugo Stinnes—$100,000,000.
Percy Rockefeller—$100,000,000.
Baron H. Mitsui—$100,000,000.
Baron K. Iwasaki—$100,000,000.
J. B. Duke—$100,000,000.
George F. Baker—$100,000,000.
The Gaekwar of Baroda—$125,000,000.
T. B. Walker—Perhaps less than $100,000,000; perhaps as high as $300,000,000.

The Richest Families.
Some explanations are necessary in these items, but of that later. More pressing is the need of accounting for some palpable omissions. The Rothschilds will occur to anyone glancing over the list. But the Rothschilds come in another class—those whose fortunes cannot be credited to any individual, but belong to a family.

In this second category the leaders are:
The Rothschilds—$250,000,000 to $500,000,000.
The Guggenheims—$200,000,000.
The Vanderbilts—$75,000,000 to $100,000,000.

The Weyerhaeusers—From $100,000,000 up.
The Astors—Estimates range from less than $100,000,000 to $700,000,000; the lower figure is probably nearer the truth.

The Mellons—$75,000,000, two-thirds of which is credited to A. W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury.
The family group should properly embrace the Rockefellers, including John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Baron Mitsui perhaps belongs here, too, for he is the head of a clan; with him should go Baron K. Iwasaki, whose family is second only to the Mitsuis. But the wealth of families is even harder to estimate than that of individuals. Consider the Rothschilds; they are scattered all over Europe. There are five of them in England alone. They have generations behind them; the founder of the house was born in 1742. Nobody can say how extensive their interests are—probably not even they themselves.

The first list of individuals is made more comprehensive by a few comments. In the first place, comes the basis for comparison. Estimates of wealth vary widely, even when they come from persons of reliable judgment. These lists represent the balanced judgment of men, averaging high in executive rank, in the financial district of New York. The figures given are based on a unit—the fortune of the late J. P. Morgan, Sr.

His estate was $78,169,024. Before his death in 1913 his estate was estimated at $100,000,000 to $150,000,000. The figures given in the list, so far as most of the Americans are concerned, are based on comparison with the elder Morgan's fortune and on the assumption that in his case the $100,000,000 figure was approximately correct.

Easy to Figure Ford.
Henry Ford's $550,000,000 was arrived at more directly. With his son, Edsel, Ford owns the Ford Motor company, Inc., which on February 28, according to its own statement, had $536,351,989 assets and $159,003,087 cash. There are also subsidiary Ford companies not covered in the statement. Ford does not need a theoretical capitalization of profits to take his place at the head of the list.

In the case of John D. Rockefeller, a complete estimate of his wealth would have to take notice of the $500,000,000 he gave to charity and to foundations up to 1921. It has been semi-officially denied that he is or ever was a billionaire. He is the head, however, of the biggest group of men of great wealth ever produced by a single industry.

The duke of Westminster's wealth is in land. In 1899 his predecessor was said to have an income of $3,750,000, and the family realty holdings were then estimated at $150,000,000.

Sir Basil Zaharoff is Europe's man of mystery, but the basis of his money is solid enough—it's Vickers, the gun firm. The war made him. Herbert, in parliament, called him the richest man in Europe and the name stuck. Zaharoff enjoys mystifying the lay world. He is an exploiter of the projects begun by others.

Stinnes is of another type. Any estimate of Stinnes' wealth is guesswork, in view of European conditions, but his industrial importance indicates at least the relative rank given him in the money hierarchy.

Of the others on the list of leaders, Mitsui's place may be disputed by Iwasaki. The Mitsuis are pushing; the Iwasakis conservative. Both groups have financial, trading and shipping interests.

The other Oriental, the Gaekwar of Baroda, may or may not be entitled to a place. His income has been variously estimated at $5,000,000, $12,600,000 and $60,000,000 a year.

Ford's Unique Supremacy.
Continue down the first list to the Americans and one finds that Ford stands virtually alone as having produced his wealth by manufacture, without having used his profits for financial purposes.

J. B. Duke started his career early in his native North Carolina, with his family's tobacco-handling firm. From that he became a leading factor in the American Tobacco company and the Continental Consolidated, British-American and Imperial Tobacco companies. He has many banking interests and still broader ventures in power.

George F. Baker of the First National bank, New York, has been long identified with railroads, steel, insurance, gas and lesser interests.
T. B. Walker of Minneapolis is among the men who cannot estimate their wealth within a wide margin of probability. To gauge it he would need not only a corps of statisticians but a regiment of timber cruisers. His lumber holdings in the Northwest and on the Pacific coast are immense. The public hears little of him, comparatively; he started as a teacher and a surveyor, and he has been a power in Minnesota for a third of a century.

In the opinion of some Thomas F. Ryan belongs in the $100,000,000 class. When he retired in 1905 he had acknowledged control of 30 corporations.

There is the other Ryan, John D. of Anacostia, who recently paid the Guggenheims $80,000,000 for holdings in Chile. He is a newcomer, more or less. As for the Guggenheims, it is difficult to get any estimates at all of their individual wealth.

Midas of Timber.
The Weyerhaeusers are hardly less difficult. Here again the wealth is timber land, as in Walker's case. Frederick Weyerhaeuser, who died in 1914, owned a hundred billion feet. It is said. The value was estimated as high as a billion dollars. A third of that would not be improbable. It went to several heirs, including F. E. John and Rudolph Weyerhaeuser.

In the list of family groups as well as that of individuals there are omissions which will surprise the average man. Perhaps some of these are unjust, but the lists represent, if not a consensus, at least a comparative verdict.

The present J. P. Morgan is not put in the $100,000,000 class, but at the top of the next lower division. His father's fortune was not handed down to him intact. Morgan, Jr., is said to be worth from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000—his personal fortune.

In the $50,000,000 list appears E. H. R. Green, who is said to have increased Hietz Green's fortune. Secretary Mellon comes here also; he is spoken of as head of a group, with oil, bank and steel interests, including his brothers, James and Richard, and James' son, William L. Secretary Mellon originally was associated with H. C. Frick.

H. E. Huntington is also placed in this class for the most part, though some estimate his wealth at more. Thomas F. Ryan, nominated by some authorities for the $100,000,000 category, comes under the lesser head in the estimates of men in close touch with actual conditions, and John D. Ryan is compared to him.

In the $80,000,000 Group.
Harry Sinclair, who has come to the fore lately through oil, is credited with $50,000,000. Vincent Astor and Otto Kahn are others, regarding Astor as an individual and not as representative of a family.

The interests of the Du Ponts are said to be evenly balanced between Pierre and Coleman Du Pont, with $50,000,000 for the total between them. The Goetzels, with a fortune founded on Manhattan real estate, are put under a similar heading, the family fortune being guided by Robert Goetz and Robert Walton Goetz.

Other $50,000,000 groups are the Whitney-Payne and Schiff families. The Harknesses would appear to be wealthier; William L. Harkness left $54,000,000 and H. S. Harkness $10,000,000.

Mention of them suggests other estates. Frederick W. Woolworth left $30,000,000; James Stillman about as much. Marshall Field's estate was $150,000,000. The Lister estate came below that figure by a third. W. K. Vanderbilt's was $52,000,000. E. H. Harriman left $80,000,000. In general, the public has been surprised at the smallness of estates as compared with lifetime estimates of wealth.

Minor Millionaires.
Five million may be correct estimates of the individual wealth of Elbert H. Gary, C. M. Schwab, J. Ogden Armour and Percy Livingston Pyne. An authoritative survey might show August Belmont and the Goulds nearer to the top. In Boston there is C. W. Barron; in California there are the Spreckelses, the Crockers and the Hellmans.

An inquiry into the size of fortunes brings out many usually overlooked. Henry Miller, the California cattle man, left $40,000,000 in land. One hears of big ore fortunes in Michigan; of a cattle raiser who owns a large slice of Arizona. In the richest sugar, pine and cotton districts of Louisiana and Mississippi you find men, poor a few years ago, who are pointed out as good for $10,000,000 at any time; the rest of the world does not know of them; they do not need to come to Wall Street.

It is a hard task to determine who are at the top of the list; get down to the $10,000,000 class and the difficulties are infinite. The Federal income tax figures for 1920 showed that the United States had 20,000 persons with incomes of $50,000 or more, indicating a capital worth of $1,000,000 in each case. There were 3,388 millionaires in New York in 1920, and in the whole country 150 incomes of more than $1,000,000.

Considerate of the Bank.
An English sailor just home from a long cruise entered a bank in Hull and greeted the clerk with: "What cheer, matey! How's your business doing, hey?"

"Not very brisk at present," answered the clerk, "but I hope to see it improve shortly."

"That's 'ard!" said the tar sympathetically. He fished out a check for £100.

"How'll you have it?" asked the clerk.

The sailor hesitated a moment, then leaned over the counter and said in a hoarse whisper: "Well, matey, I don't want to be 'ard on yer. Gimme ten pun' now and I'll take the rest a pun' a week."—Boston Transcript.

When He Remembered.
An absent-minded man came home one day after a heavy rainstorm, very bedraggled and wet. His wife met him at the door, and as he greeted her he made the remark that he had forgotten his umbrella.

She was surprised to think that he even remembered that he had forgotten anything, and asked him when he had thought of it.

With a smile of satisfaction he replied: "Why, my dear, when it stopped raining and I went to shut it."

Advertising Ethics.

Business Bible claim is a name taken by a group of young advertising men in St. Louis who have organized to demonstrate that the Bible is a good text book for modern business. The golden rule, they claim, is the only system which will end labor troubles. Some concerns which adopted these methods weathered recent storms which destroyed others. "Truth in advertising" is a slogan of more than a million active successful advertisers. The Better Business bureau established in the large cities spring from the same movement. The Bible claim meets at ten on Sunday mornings in a St. Louis church. It contains no theologians and is nonsectarian. Not even the pastor of the church it uses is a member. Just plain practical business men or women attend the class and take part in the discussions. The promoters look forward to many such classes across the continent.

Alive Though Declared Dead.

No man has ever died twice, yet two death certificates recorded the death of Jean Antie, hairdresser to Marie Antoinette. When the royal family attempted to escape from France the hairdresser went ahead as a scout. He was arrested, condemned to death and the records show that he was guillotined. But he was alive in 1814 and the Paris Register records his death in 1820. It has been said that the machine which was to have cut off his head broke down. He was one of a group of prisoners who waited for the machine to be repaired. A gap opened in the throng behind and he slipped through. The crowd closed about him. Later that day a man was seen walking with his hands behind him. He is said to have spent the night in a ditch and later to have escaped to Russia.

In memory of our loving son, Harold Davis, who departed life 1 year ago today.
When we see the precious blossom,
That we tended with such care,
Rudely taken from our bosom,
How our hearts almost despair!
Round the little grave we linger,
Till the setting sun is low,
Feeling all our hopes have perished,
With the flower we cherished so.

OPERATING GOVERNMENT TEST CAR

W. S. James and C. S. Bruce of the automobile power plant of the bureau of standards, driving the test car used to determine the power output of the engine, combustion valve of the fuel, wind resistance, etc. This car is also used in experiments to discover gasoline substitutes and is fitted with a camera which automatically records the fuel consumption.

GRIME ON MOTOR CAUSE OF DECAY

Greasy Accumulations Injurious to Various Connections and Also to Insulation.

The motorist's spring cleaning should not stop with the body, top and cushions. An engine and chassis covered with grease and dirt is a costly encouragement to delaying simple adjustments which will save money in repairs.

Clean the engine, springs, transmission housing and other parts which accumulate sticky grime with kerosene, to which some gasoline may be added. Use a wooden backed scrubbing brush with no metal on it. Metal may touch electric terminals and cause a spark which will start a fire. A much better job will result if the drip pan is removed while the engine is cleaned.

Cleaning Saves the Engine.
In addition to looking better and being easier to repair, a clean engine's hose connections, electric insulation and spark plugs will not deteriorate nearly so quickly.

With the springs cleaned, oiling suggests itself. Be sure the grease cups on the springs are full and screwed down so there will be pressure. That is not enough to save a rusted spring, however. Jack up the chassis and apply lubricant with a paint brush or a squirt gun.

If the leaves of springs are rusted together, they usually may be pried apart with a screwdriver while the car is jacked up. Repair men diagnose as a "frozen" spring a condition in which all leaves are rusted into what appears to be a solid mass. Soak the "frozen" spring in kerosene and try the screwdriver again next day.

Take Spring Spring Apart.
If the spring still balks, the best way is to remove it, take it apart, clean the leaves with kerosene, lubricate them with graphite and grease and reassemble them.

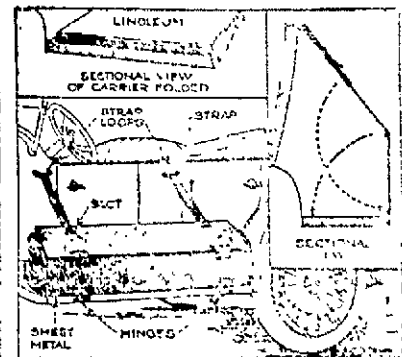

Spring covers of leather and metal, all retaining cups and high pressure lubricating systems are among recent improvements which simplify care of springs. The various covers keep out dirt and keep in lubricants so that springs rarely need attention. High pressure devices range in design from those in which a screw pressure exerts terrible force to a handy affair like a pistol which "shoots" grease when the trigger is pulled.

DEVICE HANDY FOR LUGGAGE

Two Strips of Iron Arranged on Running Board of Car Afford Storage Place.

The illustration shows a novel attachment devised by a motorist for carrying luggage on the running board of his car.

Two pieces of heavy sheet iron, slightly narrower than the running board, are hinged to each other, and one piece hinged to the outer edge of the running board, as shown. Two leather straps, attached as shown, are used to hold these pieces tightly over the luggage so that it will not be jolted out on rough roads. A piece of linoleum is glued to the outer side of the strip hinged to the running board, so that when the attachment is folded, the linoleum is uppermost.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Two Strips of Sheet Iron, Arranged on the Running Board, Provide an Excellent Attachment for Carrying Luggage, and Can Be Folded Down When Not in Use.

RETARDED SPARK IS INJURIOUS TO AUTO

Overheated Condition Harmful to Pistons, Cylinders and Other Parts of Engine.

(By William H. Stewart, Jr., President Stewart Automobile School.)

You have all seen the fellow who runs his "steaming" clunker around town. It looks for all the world like a baby locomotive, but perhaps he does not know that this overheated condition injures the pistons, cylinders, bearings and all internal parts of the engine. Shortly he learns this for himself—after he has paid a big repair bill for information that could have been obtained from any instruction book.

If you run the car with the spark retarded, the engine will overheat and carburetor. A similar effect is caused by a crippled fan or an impeded water flow. If your engine overheats it is advisable to stop instantly and find the trouble. In an emergency a very wise thing to do is to pour an abundance of oil into the crank case. Your exhaust will smoke, but the additional oil will offer protection to the inside of the engine until relief is at hand.

Clean the belt occasionally and rid it of the oil and gummy matter. Hitch up your garden hose and send its spray through the openings in the radiator, which probably is clogged with mud. Do this from the engine side of the radiator; otherwise you may short circuit the electric system. As a further precaution see that all hose connections are good and not partially closed on the inside, thereby retarding the water flow. This closing, though very slight, will retard radiation and cause trouble.

GREASE RUSTY CAR SPRINGS

Jack Up Chassis and Apply Lubricant While Weight is Off—Kerosene Cuts Rust.

Positive lubrication of springs may be secured without the purchase of additional accessories—jack up the chassis and apply lubricant while the springs are thus relieved of their weight. In this condition the spring leaves should open slightly in a fan shape. It may be necessary to spread the leaves a trifle with a screwdriver, knife, or any thin strip of metal. A few minutes' work with a squirt gun, filled with half kerosene and motor oil, will cut the rust and leave a film of lubricant between the leaves.

Sometimes a spring is rusted to the extent that it becomes "frozen" in a rigid mass. The only remedy is to take it apart, wash each leaf with kerosene and replace, inserting a heavy piece of wrapping paper thoroughly saturated with a good grade of graphite grease between each leaf.

AUTOMOBILE GOSSIP

An ounce of instruction may save a pound of repair.

A weak clutch spring can be repaired temporarily by placing washers under it.

Nearly 2,500,000 workers are engaged in or directly affected by the automobile industry.

French automobile builders are experimenting with a car driven by the heavy oil remaining in petroleum after the extraction of kerosene.

In some instances the stem of the water pump has become so worn, usually the annular grooves, that the pump cannot be packed to make it tight.

Skidding is probably one of the most common causes of automobile accidents. Yet, if the driver is careful, he should have no trouble from skidding.

Many cars are using excessive quantities of gasoline in the motor because of dragging brakes, caused by the brake mechanism being in such poor condition that the brakes do not fully release.

TO UNITE TWO CONTINENTS

Pan-American Railroad is a Stupendous Project Which is Apparently Near Realization.

The time is approaching, and will come sooner than most people expect, when it will be possible to travel in comfort by rail from New York, Chicago or San Francisco to Brazil, Santiago or Buenos Aires, by the Pan-American railroad. This great north and south line is a stupendous project, observes the Scientific American Magazine.

The scheme in its entirety involves large figures and heavy costs, the total length of the line being 10,116 miles, which is not so very far short of the combined length of the three shortest of our transcontinental systems. It should be understood that the enterprise does not, and never did, contemplate the building of an entirely new system of that length; for much of the route is made up of already existing stretches of national railroads. Taking New York as a starting point, the line runs to the Mexican frontier, and from thence through Mexico, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia and Argentina, to Buenos Aires.

Even today it is possible to travel by railroad from New York to the frontier of Guatemala; but from Guatemala to the Canal zone over half of the line has yet to be built. The longest stretch of uncompleted line is from the Canal zone to the boundary line between Peru and Bolivia, where out of a total of 3,302 miles, only 542 miles have been completed. Also there is a stretch of 127 miles in Bolivia on which work has recently been commenced. The line from Bolivia to Buenos Aires, a distance of 1,000 miles, has been completed. To date 6,500 miles out of a total of 10,116 miles have been built.

French Take to Baseball.
Baseball has not only kept alive in France since the American army came home, but has grown. In Paris there is an active city league of eight clubs that play almost as well as our semi-professional leagues, and in the north of France the cities of Turcoing, Roubaix, Lille and Douai have teams; so do Tours, Le Mans, Saint-Nazaire and Bordeaux, which were formerly American army headquarters. The French players are fast base runners and often field brilliantly, but at bat they are still shy of fast balls.—Youth's Companion.

GREEN DYE FROM CORN COBS

Science Has Added Another Achievement to its Record in Use of Raw Material.

Science has found a way of utilizing all corn cobs, short or long, in the manufacture of various chemicals. As the corn cob consists of cellulose, which is valuable for making many products, such as celluloid and paper, it is considered desirable to save the substance of the cob. The furfural, therefore, is taken from the extract which is obtained by boiling the cob in water and the cellulose can thus be kept for other purposes.

This liquid is employed for many purposes in industrial chemistry, and can be so treated that it will yield a bright green dye, which is much liked by women of fashion, says the Detroit News.

Mote and Beam.

Senator Moses, apropos of a certain monopoly, said at a dinner in Washington:

"I am no muckraker. Have you ever noticed that muckrakers as a rule are slightly incriminated with muck? A politician was taking a swim the other day in the swimming pool of a big ocean liner. A great New York society lady—one of those well-preserved society ladies with golden hair, four divorces and a platinum removable bridge—well, this lady was taking a swim, too, and she soon had the politician engaged in talk. Sitting beside him on the marble rim of the pool, she gave politics the very old deuce. "Politics are man-managed," she ended, swinging her legs girlishly in the water, "and every man has his price. He lets the world know it, too." "The politician glanced sidewise at the society lady in her ultra bathing dress. Then he said: "Well, every woman has her figure, and she doesn't mind letting the world see it, either."

Australian Government to Introduce Road Bill

It is expected that the Australian government will introduce a main road bill for New South Wales at the next session, creating a board to take charge of and finance the main roads for that province, says Consul R. Wormuth, Sydney, in a report to the department of commerce. At present there is a lack of coherence and consequent inefficiency in the matter of road building, because the control is divided among municipalities.

Rare Event Put on Record.

At Fifteenth and I streets one afternoon last week an old gentleman driving a new car got stage fright when his car got stuck in the middle of the street.

He jammed at this and pulled on that, but the car refused to budge. Behind him the cars began to pile up in front and in rear and to the sides motorists took cognizance of him.

His eyes popped from his head. He wore a strained look, as if he would like to have sunk through his car and into the earth beneath. He plainly was rattled.

And, strange to state, not a motorist hollered at him. Nobody "russed" him. Nobody laughed. Everybody seemed to be sympathetic. And when the man's car finally got under way, relieving the traffic jam, everybody seemed tremendously happy.

Yep, such cases do happen.—Washington Star.

His Idea.

"Major, in your opinion, which was the greater man and statesman, Washington or Lincoln?" asked an admiring constituent.

"When I consider the difference in the times in which they lived and remember the peculiar problems which confronted both," replied Maj. Ira K. Widenfeller, chief inspector of speedometers. "I am compelled to answer in the affirmative."—Kansas City Star.

Keeping Faith.

You talk of substantial good. This is faithfulness, and love, and sweet grateful memories, no good? Is it no good that we keep our silent promises in which others build because they believe in our love and truth?—George Eliot ("Romola").

THIS YOUNGSTER A WONDER

Interesting to Speculate What He Will Be When He Has Grown to Manhood.

Jack Schwabmeyer, twenty-four months old, of Philadelphia, appears to be able to put a large number of babies in the shade in certain accomplishments.

He has the backing of Dr. Lightner Witmer, head of the university psychological laboratory and clinic, too.

"He is the first two-year-old child," says Doctor Witmer, "successfully to complete the Wimmer form board test at this clinic. Jack can count to 50, and he counted six objects with no errors. He is able to read number symbols and can read combinations, such as eight plus four equals 12.

"He can read correctly all the letters of the alphabet, all marks of punctuation and can print several words. If words he knows are printed for him, he spells them out and pronounces them. His mother says he could read the letters of the alphabet at seventeen months.

"His memory is so fine that in many instances he seems as though he were reading passages when he is actually repeating them from memory."

HAVE SPIKES IN THEIR TAILS

How Birds Known as "Chimney Swifts" Are Enabled to Maintain Their Perches in Bricks.

Did you ever notice the chimney swallows streaming into chimneys as they finish their graceful speedy flying in the evening? Wonderfully quick on the wing are they, so quick indeed as to merit the proper name they bear, of Chimney Swifts! It is said, but no one has proved it, that their wings move alternately, not both at the same time. Hundreds of them go to roost in the same chimney and some must have wondered how they contrived to do it since there are no bars across inside of the bricks. Their feet are not made to roost upon as are those of chickens, they use them to cling to an upright surface. They prop themselves up from behind with their wonderful tail, of which every feather ends in a sharp, strong spike. They must need rest, too, for it has been estimated that in catching the flying mosquitoes and other flying insects on which they feed, the Chimney Swifts commonly fly a thousand miles a day!

Dangerous Ground.

She is one of Indianapolis' most talkative young women. And recently she became a bride. As she walked up the aisle at the church the evening of her wedding she was much excited. And the bridegroom kept saying to her in an undertone, "Walk slower; walk slower."

Later in the carriage he apologized to her for giving her advice at the church. She looked at him, a minute. "Oh, that was all right, dear," she said, "but you were near dangerous ground if you had only known it. I kept thinking at first that you were saying 'Talk slower,' and I was just getting ready to tell you what I thought of you, when we reached the altar."—Indianapolis News.

BRUTE!

Miss Oldguri—The lieutenant has captured my heart.
The Colonel—I will see to it, madam, that he is cited for bravery at the next review.

No Need for Alarm.
One night recently I read a thrilling ghost story. I kept thinking about it after I had gone to bed. To get the subject off my mind, I decided to get up and walk around. The house was dark, and upon reaching the dining room my blood ran cold at the sight before me. It turned out to be the dress form with a half-made light dress on it.—Exchange.

Corn Retained Fertility.
An Aztec N. M. woman has some old corn which was left in a cliff dwelling in New Mexico centuries ago. It had been buried in a leather basket, which was so old that when it was unearthed the leather fell to pieces, but the corn appeared to be in good condition.

Pleasant for the Bride.
As a newly married couple were leaving the registry office at Delgely, Wales, the "predominant partner" was startled to hear a stentorian voice proclaiming "Beware of the Bride!" It was the town crier, announcing a motion picture under that title.

The Whole Secret.
Progress is a matter of going in the right direction and keeping patiently on.—Anonymous.

Sand in His Pipes.
From a story: "Charlie Doornbrown buried his head on his arms and gritted his pearls."

WHO PAYS THE PIPER?

Who pays the piper when life's dance is on.
And men and women in the mass away
Of Bacchanalian revels till their youth is gone;
Who pays the piper? Answer that,
I say!
His pipes are sweet, but ah, his wage is high,
And when it's due, who'll pay him, you or I?

Someone must pay, and pay him dearly, too.
And he it is who folly's goblet sips,
And drains the dregs as though 'twere mountain dew.
Then seeks for more with eager, parched lips,
With reeling brain and glazing blood-shot eyes;
Who pays the piper? Is it you or I?

We are not puppets on some mimic stage.
But to each one is given the power to choose
Of good or evil, in this seething age.
Shall we gain happiness or shall we lose
And pay the piper what no price can buy;
I wonder shall we pay him, you or I?
—H. H. Fariss, in Kansas City Star.

STORIES THAT WOULD THRILL

Narratives of Sea Adventure Would Fade Before the Tales That Editors Could Tell.

A curiously constructed book of sea stories has been put together. One thousand sea captains and mates were asked to relate each the most interesting marine experience of his life. From these enough sea stories are collected to make a large volume.

The novelty of the project provokes another idea, more or less novel. Why shouldn't a similar "thousand and one" tales by those engaged in adventurous vocations make a readable story book? Why, indeed?

Not to explore the Wild West, the plains and the mountains for authors, how many narratives might one thousand editors contribute to a book—if not always thrilling, at least edifying?

Journalism is full of the unexpected, the mysterious, the "heart interest," much of which may be superfluous in the publications of the news of the day, but which is the best of material for reminiscence. What, Mr. Ye Editor, was the most dramatic episode in all your newspaper years? Some could make a book out of their own memories. But a book out of a thousand memories might prove to be a classic.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"Correction" Seems Humorous.

The call of the East has nothing on the call of the house of correction in Philadelphia, where one woman prisoner is now serving her one hundred and seventh sentence in that institution. This was revealed in the annual report. The woman is a familiar figure at the institution and virtually makes her home there. As soon as she serves a term and gets out it doesn't take long for her return. The nearest rival for the "honor" of record number of commitments is a man who has made eighty "trips" to the institution. Four other inmates boast of having been sent up seventy times or more.

Something Slippery Slipped.

She had been to the market, and was carrying under her arm a large package wrapped in brown paper. As she arose to leave the car something slipped from the package on to the floor. It was a wonderful, slippery fish, about two feet long.

Turning red, she hastened toward the door, but as she was about to alight a young man came running up with the offending animal under his arm, shouting from the middle of the car, "Wait, madam; you dropped your fish!"
Grabbing it, she left the car amid shouts of laughter.

Cherry Tree in Cedar Stump.

In an orchard on the banks of the Lillooet river, about four miles north of Harrison lake, B. C., may be seen a large cherry tree growing out of the top of an old cedar stump four feet high. Most of its roots have reached the ground through the middle of the stump, but one large root has run down the outside. The tree, which is of the Royal Anne variety, is in good condition and a heavy cropper.

Beaver Had Odd Home.

A "mountain beaver" building a nest in a wood pile beside a paved alley in the heart of the retail district in Tacoma, Wash., was trapped a few days ago. The incident is unusual because the nearest colonies known of these rodents are fully three miles from the storehouse to its den. Mountain beavers generally inhabit cut-over land where the young second growth furnishes them ample green food.

BOY SCOUTS

HELP MAKE NEW CITIZENS

An effective piece of Americanization work is being quietly but actively carried on all year through by the Boy Scouts of America for the bureau of naturalization of the United States Department of Labor.

In the fall of 1919 the aid of the Boy Scouts of America was sought to provide the personal, friendly touch necessary to winning the confidence of the foreign-born who wish to become citizens, and to bring them into public school classes of instruction for preparation for citizenship. The bureau of naturalization regularly issues cards of invitation urging applicants for naturalization to attend such classes, and the plan was to have these cards distributed personally by boy scouts.

Commissioner of Naturalization Raymond F. Crist states that during the last fiscal year 118,475 such cards were sent to 471 cities for distribution, bringing the total number so distributed to approximately 400,000.

The Detroit Americanization committee in reporting on 1922, their biggest year, says:

"The personal delivery of invitations to attend schools, delivered to the adult alien at his home by the boy scouts, must have been one of the big factors in filling our immigrant education classes last year."

The commissioner of naturalization, in commenting upon this year—through practical civic good turn by scouts, states:

"While the most important service to Americanization which the boy scouts have performed is doubtless that of getting in touch with applicants for citizenship, their activities have included many other 'good turns' to this cause. Among these may be mentioned taking part in public ceremonies held to present new citizens with their certificates of naturalization, acting as ushers and otherwise participating in graduation exercises of citizenship classes, and in Americanization rallies and mass meetings.

"The cumulative effect of these varied activities has been to keep before the public our native as well as our foreign-born residents, the pressing need of amalgamating the many races within our shores into one homogeneous people. In other words, the boy scouts help in maintaining this 'melting pot' for the adult foreign-born just as they form and maintain the all-American 'melting pot' among the youth of America."

POEM TO BOY SCOUTS

The author of the following poem dedicated and contributed to the Boy Scouts of America, is J. B. Strauss, president of the Strauss Bros. Bridge company of Chicago, and the designer of a majority of the large movable bridges in this country and throughout the world. Mr. Strauss came into contact with the boy scout movement when his sons became members of Troop 888 of Chicago. He interested himself in the activities of that troop and soon extended his interests to the local work in general, and in order to give practical service, accepted the position of North shore district commissioner:

A Scout I am; this is my creed:
For every day a worthy deed,
And this my faith: the love of right
And truth and peace, the strength to fight
For those in need: the will to be
My brother's prop; his trust in me
To keep and mine in heart of man:
Than this there is no nobler plan.

A Scout I am; in every land
Beneath the sun my colors stand
For Honor's sake; my hands are bound
With willing hands the world around
To service that bespeaks the strong
To do the things that conquer wrong
And did we search until Time's end,
No braver task could Fortune send.

A Scout I am; and proud am I
As troop on troop goes marching by
To march with them; to feel the thrill
Of comradeship and staunch good will
To know what message to the world
We bring; where'er our flag's unfurled,
To know that all the Earth throughout,
None rank superior to the Scout.

LEGION AND BOY SCOUTS

"One hundred posts of the American Legion have in the last year organized scout troops," states Alvin M. Owsler, national commander of the American Legion. "The Legion is heartily in favor of further development of the boy scout movement. By encouraging this development, the Legion feels that its own ideals will be perpetuated."

A TRANSFERRED GOOD TURN

A lad and a lady each with a transfer and both without change were the principal figures in the following "good turn" by a member of the boy scout troop connected with a Legion post, Milwaukee, Wis. "Gave up my transfer to a lady who had taken a wrong one," says the scout's laconic statement. "Without the proper transfer she would have had to walk quite a way, whereas I had only about a mile to go out of mine."

QUEENSLAND

Shearing Sheep in West Queensland.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

That there is a constant evolution in government is pointed out many times, with our 43 states and their peaceful experiments as illustrations. But even more radical changes are taking place, equally peacefully, in other parts of the world. Queensland, Australia, has made the most marked change of recent years in governmental machinery in the English speaking world by abolishing its senate and making its legislative body into a one-chambered parliament.

This commonwealth, which has altered so strikingly the traditional British idea of a parliament, is one of the six sovereign states of Australia, which, like the units of the United States, are bound into a federation yet are free to shape their own affairs with relatively slight limitations. Queensland—and Australia, too, for that matter, loses in apparent size because of its great distance from us. In reality it is a huge state, completely dwarfing Texas, our largest commonwealth. Its coastline is more than 2,200 miles long and is equivalent to that of the eastern United States from northern Massachusetts—down the Atlantic, around Florida and to Mobile. It has an area of 670,000 square miles.

Since Queensland is located in the southern hemisphere, its hot regions are to the north, its cooler regions to the south. Its northernmost projection, Cape York Peninsula, may, then, be compared roughly to Florida, though Cape York is much closer to the equator. To be as close to the equator as Queensland, Florida would have to be moved some 1,200 miles farther south until Key West reached the Isthmus of Panama. If Australia could be towed to our part of the world, where we could compare it to the regions we know, it would have to be turned about so that the warm regions would correspond. If it can be imagined that this were done and Cape York placed near the Canal Zone, so extensive is the state of Queensland that it would cover most of the vast expanse of the Gulf of Mexico.

Best Developed in the South.

Naturally, colonization in Queensland began along its southern coast, its mildest region climatically. Thanks to its mountains which parallel the coast, the climate of the state is not as hot as its latitude would indicate. The far northern section, however, is truly tropical and it has not been developed to any great extent. In the southern and middle sections are thriving ports and cities. Brisbane, the capital, is about the size of Bridgeport, Conn., or Houston, Tex. The State's population of about three-quarters of a million—approximately that of Oregon—is almost wholly of British origin.

The development of the tropical portions of Queensland has been slower than that of similar regions in other parts of the world because of the determination of the citizens of the state and of the entire commonwealth to maintain a "white Australia." The black and yellow races have been excluded in recent years. Not more than 20,000 of the black aborigines remain in the state, and they are steadily decreasing in numbers.

To help the development toward a "white Australia" the federal government grants a bounty on sugar-cane raised by white labor, and a sufficient sugar industry has been built up in the fertile coast valleys of Queensland to supply Australia's needs. Australia's handling of Queensland's sugar crop indicates that the federal government, as well as Queensland, is capable of striking out into new fields governmentally. All the sugar is taken over by the Australian government, and a virtual government monopoly created. Contracts are made for the refining, and both wholesale and retail prices are controlled.

Cotton Growing Died Out.
Some day Queensland may develop into a cotton producing region, for both climate and soil are favorable. Just at present, however, the "white Australia" policy makes this as difficult as it might be in the American South if no black labor were available. During the American Civil war, when cotton was scarce in the world markets and the price high, Queensland found it profitable to grow the textile. After the price fell it was even possible to keep the industry alive so long as Kanaka labor from the South Sea islands was to be had. But when these black laborers were deported cotton growing, never really important, practically died out.

There has been a certain parallelism in the development of Australia and North America. A mountain range, situated roughly like the Appalachians, extends parallel with the eastern coast from 50 to 150 miles inland. In this favored strip the first settlements were made, and for many years nothing was known about the region to the west. Over behind its mountains Queensland has a great plain region like that of the United States. It is in that portion of Queensland that Australia's great cattle industry centers. The huge ranches—called "stations"—cover thousands of acres like those in the American Southwest, and of the 14,000,000 cattle on the continent about half are in Queensland.

Cattle raising is the really dominant industry of Queensland and has had its effect on the economic side of the governmental machinery. There are state-operated cattle ranches, state abattoirs and even retail meat shops run by the state. The state goes still farther into the matter of food distribution by operating fisheries and conducting retail fish stores.

State Owns Most of the Land.
The pioneer age is not past in Queensland, despite its well developed southern coast region. Over the mountains to the west and northwest in the tropical country pioneers are still carving out a new country and bringing it under fence or plow. The state still owns staggering areas of land. Only about 6 per cent of the state's total area has been alienated or is in process of alienation. And Queensland means to hold on to the greater part of this public domain forever. The policy has been adopted in recent years of merely leasing the soil. The only exception is in the case of the "bricky pear" regions, where small tracts are given outright to settlers in return of the eradication of this stubborn cactus pest.

Brisbane, the capital of Queensland, a town nearly as large as Atlanta, Ga., is on the coast near the southern line of the state, and so is in a region of relatively mild climate. Its latitude compares closely with that of Tampa, Fla. Semi-tropical flowers and fruits make possible charming settings. But Brisbane cannot claim beauty. Though this is country in which white ants are numerous and destructive, wood seems to be the favorite building material. And many of the smaller buildings are roofed with unsightly corrugated iron. The river which runs through the city is lined with packing plants and factories.

How far Queensland has swung its governmental pendulum is shown by the fact that it was one of the two states of the Australian commonwealth in which the senate or upper house had members elected for life by the British crown. There was thus in existence a sort of colonial "House of Lords." The members of the single chamber which is left in Queensland are elected and the state, without a "conservative balance-wheel," becomes the most democratic of the commonwealth's units.

Arithmetic Made Easy.

Willie is in the fourth grade. His father tries to find out by adroit questioning just what Willie's going to school means to the boy. He found out that Willie likes his teachers, his classmates, most of them, and his lessons. But recently the parent probed deeper. Did Willie like spelling? Sure. "Do you find arithmetic lessons easy, too?" he finally queried. "Yes," was Willie's usual rejoinder. "Arithmetic's easy, awful—all but the answers."

RED HOOK BOWS TO COLONIALS

At Red Hook on Thursday, 9-5. Rosback Touched up For Ten Hits—McCue Pitches For Colonials—Keeps Eleven Hits Well Scattered—Rube Finds Some Strawberries.

"Rosback is going to pitch for our team, your team won't have a look in today." (Red Hook fan speaking.)

The fan across the river who uttered these words might have been perfectly honest in his convictions but it took just one inning for the Colonials to shatter those convictions and that inning was the first. For evidently in that inning the Colonials forgot that Freddie Rosback has a reputation of any kind and proceeded to land on his offerings to the extent that five runs came over the rubber before the inning was over.

Rosback seems to have gone back somewhat from the last time that he faced the local team. He walked two men, hit three, struck out only four, and allowed ten hits a number of which were bunched very effectively.

The all around player by the name of McCue hurled them over for the local team and he walked four, struck out five, and allowed eleven hits most of which were well scattered.

Game Starts Off With a Bang.

As told above the game started off with a bang. The first man up, McCue, was hit by a pitched ball. Coyle placed one over third base which went for a hit, and which brought McCue over the rubber with the first run of the day. Dahm got on first due to an error on the part of the second baseman. Deegan got on on a fielder's choice while both base runners were safe. Terpening hit a sharp one between first and second scoring Dahm and Coyle. Robins grounded out to the first baseman. Schwab hit to right field, scoring Deegan and Terpening. Rube Forsythe was hit by the pitcher and McCue was out on a grounder to the first baseman.

McCue Has Good Lead.

Those five runs in the first inning gave McCue a lot of encouragement and he went in the box with all the pep in the world. Not one of the Red Hook batters got anything which resembled a hit in their half of the first and two were retired by the strike out route. In fact everything went along peacefully until the fourth inning.

Red Hook Scores in Fourth.

In this inning a series of three walks, two hits, and one error gave the Red Hook clan two runs and things did begin to look rather interesting again. However the Colonials came back in the first half of the fifth inning and scored two runs due to a brace of hits by Robins, Schwab and Russell. Red Hook due to a single by Short and a double by Martin, scored another run in their half of the sixth. However the Colonials had anticipated this move and they had already scored a run in their half of the sixth. Both teams scored again in the seventh. In the eighth neither team scored but in the ninth three successive hits gave the Red Hook team one more run.

Team Changed Around Somewhat.

Due to the fact that McCue was in the box for the local team it was necessary to change the line up of the team somewhat. Terpening came in to second base, Matty Deegan went to third, Schwab went to left and Forsythe went out into right field. The combination worked to perfection.

Russell Makes Sensational Catches. Although Russell made several errors during the game, he very effectively redeemed himself by a couple of circus catches which brought him a great hand from the crowd. When Russell booted one in the first part of the game one of the fans wanted to know why Kingston had ever signed him up. It didn't take him long to find out.

Rube and the Strawberries.

Rube Forsythe, being a farmer, always has his eye out for growing vegetation and so Thursday while he was patrolling his territory in right field he discovered some ripe strawberries on the ground. Rube forgot all about the ball game as soon as he cast his eye on this mellow fruit and began to eat at once. Soon after a ball was hit out into deep right but the Rube was right after it. Billy Schwab says that he doesn't understand why all the nice things have to show up in right field when he is over in some other territory.

The Score:

Coyle 1b	1	1	2	9	0	0

M'CONNELL GIANTS HERE TOMORROW

The McConnell Colored Giants will come to this city Saturday afternoon to engage the Colonials in the first game of a double header.

Two clubs over the week end. This club has quite a number of the players which appeared here last season still with them and they are reported to have the same old fighting spirit. The Giants are a hard hitting aggregation and there is always a danger of their staging anywhere from a one to ten run rally at any time during the game. It is not known who will receive the pitching assignment for the locals but it may be that Perry will be sent to the mound again. The game will start at 4 o'clock.

Coach Schrick will certainly have to do some juggling with pitchers to pull out of the hole that he seems to be in just at the present time. If the club pulls through the twelve contests which are facing them at the present time with nine or ten wins they will have a record to be proud of.

At the present time the local team has won sixteen games and lost four which gives them a percentage of 80%. It is doubtful whether any other club in this vicinity which has played as many contests has as good a record as this.

Father Hall at Holy Cross.

The Rev. Charles Mercer Hall, rector of Saint Mary's Church, Asheville, N. C., and formerly rector of Holy Cross Church in this city, will deliver the sermon at the high Mass in Holy Cross Church Sunday morning.

Notaries and Others.

Collector of Revenue Durey announces that an investigation is being made of reports that many persons authorized to administer oaths are not in all cases performing such duty in accordance with law. Fine or imprisonment is the penalty.
